Queen Elizabeth
... jewelry worth millions

To Dazzle India

Jewels Go With Queen

LONDON (UPI)—Queen Elizabeth will take nearly $30,000,000 worth of jewels with her when she and Prince Philip leave Jan. 20 for a visit to India, Pakistan, Nepal and Iran.

The gems are not insured because they are considered irreplaceable.

Heading the list of traveling crown jewels is the most costly diadem in the world, a circlet of four huge diamond designs incorporating the English rose, Scottish thistle and Irish shamrock. It is mounted over diamond scroll work enclosed in two rows of Indian pearls.

'PRICELESS'

The cost? "Priceless" is all Buckingham Palace can say. The diadem was made originally for King George IV to wear at his coronation and can be worn only by a reigning Queen. Elizabeth wears it with a diamond necklace worn by her great-grandmother, Queen Victoria.

AS FABULOUS

The necklace worn with it is almost as fabulous. It has extra diamond drops, the largest of which is a pendant weighing 23 carats. It originally was one of the great treasures of Lahore and was presented to Victoria by the East India Company in 1851.

The queen's bodyguard, Chief Inspector Albert Perkins, of Scotland Yard, is responsible for the treasure.

CALL ELECTION—WE'LL WIN PEARSON'S DARE TO JOHN D

Canada Likes Left Wing Liberal Rally Proves It

By DAVE MCINTOSH
OTTAWA (CP)—Anyone for right wing?

The evidence continued to pile up yesterday that, federally at least, Canadians are nearly all left-wingers. Some right-wingers may be around but there hasn't been a peep out of them of late.

At its national rally, Liberals took another left turn with advocacy of a medical care plan, a start on free education at all levels, more federal aid for western farmers and the like.

This poses an awkward problem for the New Party. It may be forced to move even farther left—so far that it

The CCF has long been used to crowding from the Liberals. Former leader M. J. Coldwell used to say he didn't mind any party kidnapping CCF planks as long as needed reforms started.

Supposedly, the Progressive Conservative party is the right wing in Canada. But under Prime Minister Diefenbaker it has been pulled farther and farther left.

His announcement of a royal commission to study health and his federal aid for Prairie farmers are examples. There have been reports some Conservatives are unhappy about his leftist policies but nobody is strong enough to oppose him openly.

By a process of elimination it can be said Social Credit is the only right-wing party. But it has no representation in Parliament now.

LESTER PEARSON
... New Party hit

'Sooner The Better'

OTTAWA (UPI)—Lester Pearson, given "the entire confidence" of the Liberal party as its leader, last night challenged Prime Minister Diefenbaker to call a federal election, which he said the Liberals would win.

Pearson, who received a 10-minute ovation from 2,000 Liberals as the party's three-day national rally ended, called the rally "a magnificent demonstration of the resurgent strength and vitality of our party."

PROGRESSIVE

"The policies worked out here," he said, "put before the Canadian people a responsible and progressive set of national policies."

Pearson said the policies were worked out "in a way that gives ample opportunity for the kind of careful consideration on which Canadians can make their choice when an election does come."

"I hope that day will come very soon, and may the prime minister bring it on, the sooner the better."

STRIKING LIST
Pearson said the government's "list of mistakes of omission and commission is long and striking."

He charged the Diefenbaker administration with "failure to even understand, let alone deal with the tragic problem of unemployment" and the issue of economic growth.

The Canadian people, Pearson said, "are becoming more and more aware that, while the present ministers may be skilful in the advertising arts of politics, they are not efficient or decisive in the far more important business of government."

VERY-SURVIVAL

"With our security and prosperity, our very survival at stake, sound and steady and efficient government is more important than smart politics," he added.

Pearson described the link of the CCF and the Canadian Labor Congress into the New Party as "a marriage of convenience" built on the CCF's "virtual disappearance."

AMALGAMATE

"We are told it is to be a party in which the individualistic farmers of the West are to amalgamate with big union leaders and socialist intellectuals."

"This, I suggest, will be a marriage of inconvenience, of conflicting interests."

"There is no need for any occupational party in this country as long as the Liberal party remains liberal and for reform."

Police Suspect Foul Play

Child Critically Hurt

85th Arrest

Cell 'Home' To Heiress

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—Uranium heiress Mrs. Lucile Boyd Gallegos Gillham celebrated her 35th birthday in spectacular manner Wednesday.

When police arrested her early Wednesday morning, they said her car was pointed the wrong way in a one-way street and had collided in order with a Cadillac, Lincoln and a Chevrolet.

It was Mrs. Gillham's 85th arrest in the city of Spokane alone.

She was booked on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving, having no operator's licence and being drunk in public.

Then she was taken to the women's section of the city jail where she has a private television set, purchased several years ago to make her stay behind bars more pleasant.

Officers said Mrs. Gillham told them she was returning from Idaho and a pre-birthday party when she got turned around in the city's one-way street system.

Mrs. Gillham, then Mrs. Gallegos, first hit the headlines when she and her younger brother received $340,000 for the rights to uranium discovered on their inherited Indian reservation land near Wellpinit, Wash.

Mercy Flight From Ucluelet

RCMP investigators will fly to Ucluelet from here today to investigate circumstances surrounding critical injuries sustained by a three-year-old youngster rushed to Victoria by plane and taxi last night.

In poor condition is Leslie Hill, daughter of logger Bruce Hill of Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island. Dr. H. R. McDiarmid of Tofino said the child was suffering from a fractured skull.

SOMETHING WRONG

Circumstances surrounding the infliction of the injuries were not known here last night, but RCMP spokesman said "there is a strong indication that there is something wrong here."

Police believe that foul play may be involved, but refused to elaborate.

INJURED MONDAY

The tot is believed to have been hurt Monday.

Public health nurse Myrtle Saxton, an unidentified pilot and a veteran taxi driver combined forces to rush the three-year-old girl from the Tofino hospital to Royal Jubilee Hospital last night.

CALLED FOR ESCORT

Taxi driver G. E. Armstrong of Port Alberni, who made the 130-mile trip in 2½ hours, pulled into a service station on Douglas and phoned for a police escort through the city.

Armstrong said the pilot, whose name he didn't know, did a wonderful job "bringing the plane in and landing when it was dark and in rough water."

New Professor Joins Outcry Over Welfare

VANCOUVER (CP)—A university of British Columbia professor Wednesday added his voice to the growing number of critics calling for an investigation into B.C. welfare services.

Prof. W. G. Dixon of the UBC school of social work said:

"The Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows B.C. leads the parade in social problems in Canada... An investigation would be desirable at any time."

Prof. Dixon said rising unemployment has brought a special dilemma as the demand for social assistance to family financing has swamped existing services.

No Comment Black Tells New Critics

Welfare Minister Welsey Black stolidly refused to answer criticisms of his department yesterday as more and more people added fuel to the fire in demanding an investigation into the charges made by former B.C. superintendent of child welfare Miss Ruby McKay.

"At the risk of repeating myself, no comment," said Mr. Black.

Miss McKay, who quit her post Dec. 31, charged last week that she resigned because of the government's restrictive policies towards welfare.

Use of A-Arms in Canada Still Under Consideration

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Harkness repeated Wednesday that use of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil is "still under consideration" and is a matter to be determined by the government.

The minister made the statement denying a remark that Canada's participation in NORAD does not require use of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil.

U.S. Fears Rising

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

American defence planners view with rising concern expressions of sentiment in Canada favoring a loosening of military ties with the U.S.

A Pentagon informant said there seems to be an element of "resignation" in Canada towards meeting the nuclear threat.

His comment was on Liberal leader Pearson's call that Canada do away with interceptors.

(See below.) An American authority said the Pearson statement could not be "kissed off" as an isolated Canadian opinion.

CCF Leader Hazen Argue has called NORAD a waste of time because there is no defence against hydrogen bombs.

American planners say they are wondering "just how far Canada really wants to go."

Only Unity Can Save Continent

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—State department spokesman Lincoln White said yesterday the defence of North America can be assured only through Canadian-American co-operation.

"We need Canada in this effort and they need us," he told a press conference.

White was commenting on a statement by Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson that Canada should alter its role in North American Air Defence Command, doing away with interceptors—manned or unmanned—but continuing to co-operate closely with the U.S. in matters of air detection, identification and warning.

"Let me say that Mike Pearson is an old friend of the United States," White told the press conference.

Keep NORAD Say Liberals

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Liberal rally last night rejected a proposal that Canada withdraw completely from the NORAD Air Defence Command.

Instead, it adopted a platform favoring the elimination of Canada's interception role and its limitation to detection, identification and warning.

The resolution was in line with the proposal put before the rally two nights ago by party leader Lester Pearson.

World Ignores Starving Congo

ROME (UPI)—The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has failed to find international support for a relief program to halt Congo famine which is killing 200 men, women and children a day.

FAO officials came away empty-handed from an emergency meeting—its third since Christmas—with 24 member nations at its world headquarters here.

Experts have estimated it will take $3,000,000 worth of food plus tens of thousands of dollars in transportation costs to relieve extreme starvation among 150,000 Baluba refugees in the Congo over the next six months.

The FAO was advised just three weeks ago by UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld it would have to assume responsibility for halting the famine because the situation had deteriorated beyond the capacity of the UN Congo operation to deal with it.

Thus far only $750,000 in aid has been promised.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

SOON Victoria will have no front door. There will be no entrance to the town, except through ranks of motels, warehouses and hamburger stands.

Pretty motels and warehouses, yes. But motels and warehouses, all the same.

Already the town reminds me somewhat of a former house of mine, which you entered through the bathroom. It is much like my present house, which you enter through a cupboard full of junk.

Already doomed is the last pleasant place at the city's entrance—the green slope to the Colquitz River, with its bordering trees and bushes, on the Trans-Canada Highway north of Victoria.

If present plans are carried through, that place will soon be tidied up, a lot of the shaggy grass and foliage swept out of the way, and the ground occupied by a handsome new industrial estate.

This past lies in Saanich. The other day I ran into Reeve George Chatterton and asked him what he thought of these plans to improve the green glade by coating it with blacktop.

"The mistake was several years ago, when the property was zoned for auto court use," he said. "That should never have been done. Now it's too late."

Even if the plans to turn this property into an industrial estate are halted, he said, it will only be given over to auto courts, anyway.

"Why not buy it as a park?" I asked.

"Too expensive, now," he said.

To be fair, Mr. Chatterton is one of the most far-sighted public men you could find in this region. He is always campaigning to save park land for future generations.

However, he believes that park land should be set aside in less expensive areas, away from highways. There is lots of land available. The problem is to gain the support of the provincial government, which is leary of parks within municipal boundaries.

Why should Saanich carry the whole load of paying for parks that will be used by people from all over southern Vancouver Island? The answer (Reeve Chatterton believes) will be some kind of metro government.

Under a plan like this, the municipalities would keep their identities. Saanich would still be Saanich. Esquimalt would still be Esquimalt. But an inter-municipal government would run the parks and several other matters. All parts of Greater Victoria would help pay.

However, I still think that the green place at the city's entrance should be set aside as a park, no matter how expensive it might be.

Your Good Health

Treatment Can Alleviate Bothersome Hot Flashes

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, MD

"Dear Dr. Molner: I had a complete hysterectomy about five years ago and came out of it fine. I had a time of hot flashes, etc., and then they stopped. Recently I've been having them again. Is this normal? Will they continue for years? Should I take the needles? I can live with them if I must, but they are annoying at times.—Mrs. G. R."

The symptoms (or annoyances) from surgical menopause are likely to be more severe than in the case of natural menopause.

NO LAW

In either case, the basic reason is the same. The ovaries are put out of action. In natural menopause, they gradually quit producing the hormones that are associated with youth and early middle age. In surgical menopause (hysterectomy, and removal of the ovaries) the cessation is abrupt.

In either case, hot flashes

Hormone Medication Successful

may or may not result. There's no law of nature that says hot flashes have to result from menopause. Sometimes the system adjusts easily to the new state of affairs. Sometimes the adjustment takes a bit of time, and the body rebels and produces these "hot flashes."

What I want, most of all, to communicate is this: You don't have to have hot flashes in menopause, whether it's a case of natural menopause, which every woman experiences, or "surgical menopause," which some women have because of the need for surgery before the natural menopause occurs.

The flashes may not occur at all, or may be so few and so mild that they don't demand any attention. In other cases, hot flashes can be annoying, but they need not continue for years.

The symptom can be controlled quite successfully by short periods of treatment with hormone medication—or "taking the needles," in the words of Mrs. G. R. But it is also quite possible to give this medication by mouth.

MAY REPEAT

Sometimes it may be advisable to repeat these short courses of treatment periodically for a time, and in other instances no treatment at all is required, since most women can tolerate some discomfort without worrying or being unduly troubled.

Woman should not feel that they will have to continue taking hormones indefinitely. It isn't so. If they realize that use of hormones is a temporary measure, required only until the body "gets its balance again," chemically speaking, they can avoid the severe worries that some women have to contend with. Menopause, you see, is a limited period of readjustment. It is not a matter of endless discomfort.

"Dear Mr. Molner: Is it possible for a woman to be in the change of life and still have regular periods? I am 44.—S. G."

If periods are regular at 44, I doubt that change of life, or menopause, is responsible for the various symptoms you mention. (I shortened your letter, because I receive questions basically like yours, although the particular symptoms vary. Menopause should not be used as a handy excuse for just anything that happens to go wrong!)

Note to B. C. D. Mrs. R. K. and others: The usual age for menopause to begin is in the middle 40s or thereafter, but there is no fixed time. Sometimes it starts early; sometimes it doesn't start until the early 50s.

The frequent question about how long it is still possible to have children cannot be answered positively, but in all but rare instances you are safe in accepting this general rule: Conception is usually not possible a year after the last period, or after the age of 52. I have been told of women having babies later than that, but I have no first-hand knowledge of such cases, and I am inclined to suspect the accuracy of reports of greater ages.

Budget Crimps Streets

Saanich public works committee is facing the problem of where to give priority in an extensive works program restricted by limited funds.

Committee started by piling municipal engineer Neville Life's suggested reconstruction of six main roads, to three projects which include continuation of work on Quadra, reconstruction of part or all of Cloverdale and construction of a connecting road and improvements on Tattersal.

HINGE ON ESTIMATES

Work on Cloverdale and Tattersal will hinge on cost estimates.

A tour will be made of 15 secondary roads to determine which are in worst need of repair. Approval was given for expenditure of $31,250 for essential storm drains. The remainder will be left until budget time.

VOTED $50,000

Committee voted $50,000 of an estimated $147,000 water-works revenue for maintenance and replacement of small mains with two-inch mains.

Condition Still Serious

Condition of Sub-Lieutenant Maybeth Orchard, RCN, injured in an automobile accident Dec. 15, remains serious despite improvement, and she will require specialized therapy for some time.

After the accident, she was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital, closest to the scene of the accident. As soon as her condition improved, she was transferred to Naden Hospital for continuation of specialized care.

Khrushchev Picks 'Crown Prince'

LONDON—Frol Koslov, secretary of the Soviet Communist party central committee, is being groomed for the succession should anything happen to Nikita Khrushchev, say Communist sources here.

Khrushchev, 67 in April, recently has been ill though he is reported fit now. He has high blood pressure, with the attendant possibility of a heart attack.

WASHINGTON — Pamela Turnure, 23, a secretary in the office of President-elect John Kennedy and a look alike for Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, has been hired to handle press relations for the new president's wife.

TORONTO — John Moss, unemployed plumber, said he expects to be arrested for indecent exposure because he can't replace his threadbare trousers on his $1 monthly clothing allowance. He asked the city for more.

JACKSONVILLE, Ark. — Airman Jerry Reynolds, 22, admitted he broke into two graves at cemeteries here and took one body and jewelry from another. Reynolds told police: "I've realized for some time I was sick."

CARBON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — Nevada gamblers raked a record $200,137,144 in winnings last year from their gaming tables and slot machines.

Montreal 'Laughs' At Crime

MONTREAL (CP) — Two leading university professors Tuesday blamed "low public morality" for what has almost certainly been the most crime-ridden year in the history of Montreal.

Ronald Cheffins, associate professor of criminology at McGill University, said the city had too much tolerance "for what are often border-line activities."

"People here are almost amused by all the crime," he said. "The man on the street seems to think a lot of crime makes the city more cosmopolitan and dignified. There is a generally low morality here."

Professor Maxwell Cohen, acting dean of the McGill law faculty, agreed.

"There traditionally has been a public fear of a too-efficient police force. A higher level of public morality would have a self-policing effect."

City Youth Charged In Robbery

Transferred from juvenile in open court, 17-year-old William Merchant, 3156 Calumet, yesterday was charged with robbery with violence following a purse-snatching Monday night.

The youth is accused of taking a purse belonging to Miss Maynard Grange, Toronto, which contained $130, during a scuffle in the 800 block of Humboldt Street. Miss Grange was tripped and knocked to the sidewalk.

Two passing motorists chased and caught one of the three youths involved, and the purse and its contents were recovered.

When Merchant appeared yesterday, defence counsel Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre asked for a remand to Jan. 16 for election of trial method. Bail was continued at $1,000.

MONTEVIDEO (AP)—Police stormed headquarters of Uruguay's Communist party Wednesday and seized 131 persons in a drive to check demonstrations supporting Fidel Castro.

Aim of the leftists apparently is to prevent the government from breaking relations with Cuba. A huge demonstration has been called for today by Castro partisans.

Dean of students Joe Williams said Charlayne Hunter, 18, and Hamilton Holmes, 19, were suspended "for their own protection, and that of other students."

Williams said the Negroes have been picked up by the state patrol and taken to their homes in Atlanta.

Dangerous and Misleading

IT may have been impolite but Liberal Leader Lester Pearson certainly invited the suggestion of a New York newspaper that a royal commission, "including some psychiatrists," should be appointed to study him. At his bidding the Liberal rally in Ottawa has fashioned a defence complex at once contradictory and confusing.

It would take Canada out of NORAD but continue its NATO partnership. These alliances are complementary, as the former Liberal government which initiated the NORAD tie-up—with Mr. Pearson as a concurring member—recognized at the time. NORAD does for North America what NATO does for Europe.

The newly-proclaimed Liberal policy means that Mr. Pearson is willing that Canada should go all out to protect European soil but that in defence of its own territory it should limit itself to the half-hearted measure of radar detection only. Canadian forces would stand equipped, alert and ready in Europe but not at home. Anything more anomalous, and foolish, would be hard to imagine.

It is no wonder that a New York newspaper is so startled that it recommends an examination of Mr. Pearson's thinking. The latter has been woolly-minded ever since he became leader of the Opposition, and his public utterances since then on many questions, but especially on foreign affairs and defence, have been difficult to understand.

His rejection of NORAD for instance is based on the implied use in emergency of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil. There is the declared policy of the Diefenbaker government that it will have the final say on location of any such weapons, but even so the Liberal view is inconsistent and irrational. Come any need for nuclear intervention in Europe NATO will use this power and Canadian troops will be involved, for they share the arms and weapons of that Allied command.

How it can be all right for Canadians to handle nuclear weapons abroad but not in a dire emergency in defence of their own country at home, is a mystery. More logical in fact had Mr. Pearson advocated withdrawing from NATO as well as NORAD. At least this would have been consistent even if gravely unwise.

It is no easier to follow his thinking when he says that the course he advocates—which simply means throwing aside the collective defence of North America—would "enable our voice to be stronger" in the United Nations. The opposite would result, for it would reveal Canada to be so weak and vacillating, so unwilling to bear its rightful share of a common defence burden, as to reduce its influence to nil.

Nor in the stark reality of such an eventuality as attack would this policy prevent the use of nuclear power in North America. It would simply rob Canada of any control whatsoever of the elements then raging around and embracing it. Patently, also, it would breed disregard by America of any Canadian considerations of defence. A nation has no influence with a former partner whom it has let down by walking out of an alliance.

Some hint of the confusing attitudes that color Liberal views at the current Ottawa manifesto convention is contained in the wide range of promises they are framing for the electorate. There are vast schemes put forward concerning health plans, pensions, scholarships, subsidies, unemployment benefits, involving countless millions of dollars but with never a word as to how the money is to be found to pay for them. Recalling the Liberal criticism of federal deficits, the new Liberal platform is a hodge-podge patently produced by a sense of panic. The Liberals are desperate and grasping at every device that might be thought to woo the voters.

It is out of this welter of bemused thinking that the Pearson defence policy has emerged, in a manner that will be baffling to all Canada's allies and which makes one thankful that the Liberals are not in office. Under Mr. Pearson's leadership it is plain that in foreign affairs this country would be set back immeasurably from its present position of growing influence as a principal spokesman for the middle powers. Mr. Pearson no longer shows the acumen that enhanced his reputation in the diplomatic realm; party leadership, one suspects, is too much for him.

Something Wrong Somewhere

SOMETHING obviously is wrong with or in the provincial department of welfare. Officials with the experience and seniority of Miss Ruby McKay do not throw up their life work for frivolous reasons or simply out of pique. Nor do men like Dr. McCann, UBC psychologist and consultant to a prominent body concerned with child welfare, so roundly condemn the operation of a department without at least some cause.

Where the blame lies no one on the outside can say at the moment, because there is insufficient authoritative information on which to reach conclusions. What is abundantly plain to the public, however, is that there has been dissension within the department, in consequence of which it cannot function as it should.

Whether this is due to shortcomings of government policy or to some other cause—such as a clash of personalities—cannot be determined, because although Miss McKay has at last spoken, there is a reluctance to talk among others who could throw light on a very disturbing situation.

Any breakdown in welfare, especially with respect to orphans and the children of broken or destitute homes, is a serious matter.

Provincial Welfare Minister Black has declined to make any statement whatever. That is his prerogative, though in the circumstances the wisdom of silence may be questioned.

In theory a minister may be answerable to the public only through parliament, but he is not bound to maintain silence or to reserve an explanation for the House. In practice ministers of the crown everywhere freely make statements on matters concerning their departments without waiting for the House to sit. Mr. Black is not doing himself, his government or the department of welfare any good by refusing to discuss something which the public has a right to know.

However, the opportunity to press for an explanation will come reasonably soon. The B.C. legislature will begin the 1961 session on Jan. 26, and it is certain that the opposition will not waste any time in presenting the minister with questions. For the sake of the efficient and humane administration of the department, it is to be hoped that the answers will not be as evasive as some of those which Premier Bennett's government has given to the House in the past.

Interpreting the News

Mandate for Peace

By ALAN HARVEY, Canadian Press Staff Writer

PEACE in Algeria now looms as a distinct possibility.

President de Gaulle's victory in the weekend referendum, more decisive than many observers expected, creates a climate for negotiations that could end the bitter six-year war within months.

Possibly the biggest stumbling block now is the attitude of the rebel leaders headed by Ferhat Abbas. Their views appear to have hardened in recent weeks. If they insist that peace talks should be strictly a two-way matter between de Gaulle and themselves, without taking into account what de Gaulle calls "other tendencies," the developing trend toward peace may be stalled.

Certainly with France's clear vote of confidence behind him, de Gaulle has a mandate for peace. Despite all obstacles, despite the ambiguity of the questions posed in the referendum, France has shown its weariness of the drawn-out conflict between European and Arab.

The next move is likely to be another visit by the 70-year-old president to Algeria to set up "provisional institutions," including an executive that may be headed by a Moslem. One name mentioned is that of Ali Maieem, an Algerian deputy.

British comment on the referendum concentrates on two related themes:

It is the final nail in the coffin of the myth that "Algeria is French," the slogan pursued for so long and at such cost to France in the belief that 1,000,000 European settlers could forever retain mastery in a land also inhabited by nearly 10,000,000 Moslems.

It isolates and discredits the French nationalist right, political adherents in metropolitan France of the "Algerie Française" theory. The vote shows this group is a minority more notable for noise than numbers.

"This is the end of a legend," says Sam White, writing in the Evening Standard. "As a political factor, the Algeria-is-French slogan now is as dead as the dodo."

An example of the rough treatment suffered by right-wing advocates of a No vote in the referendum came from the celebrated winefields of Beausé, where 80 per cent voted in the affirmative. Beausé is the stronghold of Roger Duchet, leader of the powerful independent group in the French assembly. The independents are staunchly conservative, and Duchet had called for a negative response in the referendum.

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

CANADA has reached the 18,000,000 mark in terms of population. If that does not seem a lot when set alongside its large expanse of territory, or when contrasted, say, with Italy's 50,000,000 or Spain's 30,000,000, it can be remembered that stature rests not only in numbers but also in quality, and in the latter sphere a Canadian has no cause to keep his head down. Rather the reverse, for this country's influence extends beyond its proportionate count of heads.

It is interesting to look back and note that when the U.S.A. had a similar-sized population Abraham Lincoln was but a promising young lawyer and the bad lands of the west were being infiltrated by the forerunners of the heroes who may see nightly on television. Britain at about the same stage of population count, 18,000,000, had just decided to let Wellington retire from Downing Street. The comparison with Canada therefore embraces a great flow of historical water under the proverbial bridge.

The present family of Canadians is roughly twice the size it was when this writer first came to these shores 40 years ago, to receive a pleasant welcome and become imbued by no little love for the country he now calls his own. The experience has been rewarding and he would not now exchange it for any other, albeit he has a permanent corner in his heart, naturally, for the land from which he sprang.

This writer then, along with his contemporaries, has watched Canada double its human quota and grow in character and identity, and for all the seemingly overwhelming influences of a large neighbor he does not doubt but that this process will continue. Canada can go forward to a richer heritage in store, in step with the large comity of nations among whom it already plays no inconspicuous part, and a part not related to its comparatively small population when global totals are considered.

It was Laurier's prediction that this century would belong to Canada and so it will in the sense of national integrity and the fulfillment of fine ideals and a humanitarian outlook on the world in general. Or so it can if Canadians remain true to their own responses and fashion a pattern that reflects themselves and no others. This is perhaps not easy to do in the complex world of today but all worthwhile things are attained only by effort and some degree of dedication.

Looking back again the age of Laurier seems as far away as that of Lincoln or Wellington. There was no thought then of the uncounted, unknown human heads that peopled far-off lands or the impact these would make before the twentieth century was out. The proliferating millions of Africa alone, taken with their emergent consciousness of national aims and perspective—not even to consider the 600-million Chinese or the 400 millions in India—make it obvious that this will never be Canada's century if the criterion be that of sheer numbers. Nor will the U.S.A. or the U.S.S.R. at roughly 180,000,000 and 200,000,000 respectively in 1960, be standing still while Canada reaches out towards, say, the 40 or 50-million mark.

In population we shall never be able to claim this century as our own, but we can make it noticeably aware of the stability and character of a people fortunate in the bounties they have inherited. Good gear is a matter of quality, not size, even in an era when others outstrip you by a preponderance of human heads. That is the challenge that looms ahead.

Reports from Ottawa

THE big Liberal prayer-meeting going on at the Ottawa Coliseum may be raucous and flashy, but it's got a very serious purpose. That is to draft a new charter for modern-age Liberalism.

In essence these 2,000-odd Liberals and liberals jamming Ottawa Ex's livestock arena—an interesting combo of aromas—are looking for answers to "Where do we go from here?"

Most of them, I think, already know where, or in what direction, the party has to go if it is to maximize its chances of beating the Conservatives next election. That is to the left, to embrace more radical and socialist ideas.

And it doesn't have much time. Next summer the New Party coalition of labor and the CCF will be officially launched with the purpose of taking over the political left on a sounder basis than the CCF has ever achieved. The New Party's hope is to jam the Liberals between the New Party and the Tories—grinding the Grits to grit so that the only effective political forces left will be socialism and conservatism.

There's small profit in a political opposition retooling the successful policies of the party in power. This destroys the opposition's ideological identity, makes voters think there's no real difference between the ins and the outs, and leaves the voters less reason to vote the outs in.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's success in moving the old Tory party of George Drew into the middle of the political road forces the Liberals to move further left or be content with a middle program.

An interesting question is how far left Diefenbaker can stretch without over-reaching himself. Currently he has let Finance Minister Fleming—a traditional Drew-days

Tory—produce a budget that pleases the big business element that was the mainstay of the Drew party. At the same time he appears to take a big stride to the left with a royal commission to study health insurance.

But right now the Liberals are concerned not so much with the Tories perhaps trying to cover too much territory as with their own task of staking out an ideological claim that will give them a strong basis of operations for the next election.

An obvious danger the Liberals face in laying down new policy well before an election campaign is that the Tories can pick it over and steal what they want. Like the raids the Liberals used to make on policies expounded by the CCF.

Already the health insurance royal commission is evidence of this—set up almost on the eve of the Liberal party at which any informed person might guess health insurance would be a main consideration. But Liberal leader Pearson decided he had to risk Tory piracy in order to get the voters thoroughly acquainted with the New Liberalism before they go to the polls.

Besides, there is a practical political limit to the reach of the party trading under the Conservative label.

When Pearson said last week that "We will re-examine our policies in the light of today's and tomorrow's needs and we will add to them and change them where necessary," he must be assumed to have been talking about the party's needs as well as Canada's needs.

It is as true today as it was when it was first said many years ago: "Platforms are to get elected on." And platforms are the foundations of platforms.

Tycoon's Lament

By GREGORY CLARA

WHEN a major-general, all starched up in body, mind and personality, suddenly sees, in the stiff ceremonial ranks he is inspecting, a buck private with whom he went to public school eyeing him with a twinkling sardonic eye, what are his feelings?

When a millionaire industrialist, on hailing a taxi, has the door flung open for him and finds himself gazing into the cheerful face of a long-forgotten schoolboy chum at the taxi wheel, what are his thoughts?

By long odds the financially most successful member of my old high school class shared a pew on an aircraft with me recently, for a short flight. He confided to me that his health had not been good the past three years, and his looks confirmed it. He was thin and dyspeptic, which is the old way of saying he had ulcers.

Naturally we talked about our former schoolmates and how they had fared.

"You know," said my prosperous seat mate, querulously, "what makes me so mad is to run into some of them, now and then, who haven't done anything, haven't amounted to anything: but they look so darn healthy!"

Uncharitable Fun

(From The New York Times)

IN a drab world we hesitate to say there could ever be too many jokes, but it is just possible that jokes about the president playing golf are in over-supply. We make unusual, indeed cruel, demands on our presidents. We need hardly insist that they sit incessantly in sackcloth and ashes, studying official documents.

The critics and the jesters would lose their sport if the president took his recreation indoors, as in a game of poker, an evening with a whodunit, previewing a new movie, or watching westerns on television. But once the reaction becomes viable, and more healthily outdoors, it becomes an easy target for political or journalistic exaggeration.

Mr. Kennedy has been playing golf almost daily while in Florida. He apparently enjoys the game. He may not play so well as to suggest a mis-spent youth, but if he plays only on vacations he will certainly play worse rather than better when he finishes his term of office. This is nothing to worry about.

But the United States might well worry its conscience over whether it has been having so much uncharitable fun with presidential golf that it has made a trip around the course a political liability too great for a president to bear. That would be absurd. Mr. Kennedy cannot afford to let other people dictate how he takes his exercise.

Washington Angle

Kennedy Is Unflinching

By MARQUIS CHILDS

IN these last days before he repeats the oath that will make him the 35th president of the United States John F. Kennedy finds himself at the centre of whirling pressures not unlike those that beat on him during the frenzied weeks of the campaign. But, now as then, he is calm and collected at the eye of the hurricane.

It is his decisiveness that the members of his loyal staff speak most warmly about when they discuss the president-elect. You ask him what to do about this or that matter, large or small, and he tells you in his quiet voice, and that's that.

This transition period of two months and nearly two weeks—dangerously prolonged in the kind of world in which we live—has been far from easy. Kennedy has had to exercise his decisiveness time and again on matters of major importance and on minor details, to ends both positive and negative.

Last week his secretary of state-designate, Dean Rusk, telephoned him in Palm Beach to say that the Eisenhower administration proposed to break off relations with Cuba in a few hours. But they wanted the incoming president to know that if he gave the word they would hold it up.

With the shrewd political knowledge that is an important part of his equipment for the White House Kennedy knew he had no choice here. He might, in fact, have preferred to have taken his own course after January 20. But should he have exercised the right of veto that the outgoing administration seemed to be giving him he knew full well that the news would have been leaked and whatever happened in the interval in Cuba blamed on him.

So he followed the line that he has consistently taken since November 8. He said he could not accept responsibility in any form until after his inauguration. This was his response when he was prodded to join in approving in advance a nuclear weapons potential for NATO and an action in Laos.

Partly, this has been a proper regard for his position. But in part, too, it has been a feeling of concern—dismay almost—over the efforts to impair the usefulness of C. Douglas Dillon whom Kennedy named secretary of the treasury. To one who knows Washington as well as Kennedy does, out of his 14 years in Congress, the leaks hinting that Dillon in accepting a post in a Democratic administration had gone against the wishes of both President Eisenhower and Vice-President Nixon came from perfectly evident sources.

Dillon is a key figure in the political equation that Kennedy is trying to put together so that he will be able to do what he profoundly believes must be done in the nation and the world. The question is one of confidence in a new man and a new administration when half the people voted for his opponent.

And this must come against the background of the virtual immunity from criticism that Eisenhower has enjoyed as her president during his eight years in the White House.

Kennedy finds a certain ironic humor in an editorial praising the president for breaking off relations with Cuba so that the incoming man would not be confronted with this problem.

As he looks about the world the president-elect has no illusions about what he must try to do in his first year in office and what is likely to happen. He wants to keep the lines to the Russians open. He knows that no quick solution—no abrupt summit—can be rushed if only because there must be preparation for acceptance of what can be achieved. If it is always necessary to add, anything can be achieved.

But he is trying very hard in this interval to close no doors. He understands fully and completely the way in which the American position on China has been hopelessly frozen in the ice of prejudice and fear in recent years, and with the same knowledge he can forecast the explosion almost certain to occur in the United Nations General Assembly when the question of admission of Red China comes up again and a majority refuses to bow any longer to the fiat of the United States.

So it is with disgust that he sees an effort to embarrass his under secretary of state-designate, Charles Bowles, by raising in relation to his confirmation what Bowles may or may not have said about Communist China. This has its origin, in part at least, among the old China lobbyists whose faith in Chiang Kai-shek knows no bounds. But it makes headlines and adds to the overflying measure of troubles the new administration confronts.

Dillon, John J. McCloy, Robert McNamara and the other Republicans whom he is bringing into his official family are part of what Kennedy sees as a national administration. He has the deepest respect for their views and their abilities and he is surely aware of their political value in a Democratic operation. Above all in his view, they complete the picture of ability, capacity, versatility with which this young man, with his quiet, unflinching determination, means to attack the future.

ALL Power Is Public Business

Monopoly Best For Distribution

By CHARLES W. NASH

Because of its monopolistic character the electric energy business is public business, no matter who owns or operates it. The policies that shape it are the concern of everyone because the customers, the public, are the ones who must pay the going price of energy.

The public often regards the electricity utility business as a complex mystery quite above comprehension. But when reduced to its simplest terms, it is basically the same as any other business.

Behind Bill

Behind the monthly bill for electric service is a business that may be complex, public and international but at the same time simple and personal. Its product the kilowatt-hour cannot be wrapped up and tied with a string but it is marketed according to the same principles as are many other manufactured products.

Production parallels that of most consumer goods; the generating station is the manufacturing plant, the transmission line the wholesaler, the local distribution circuit the retailer. Where the kilowatt-hour differs from the pair of shoes is in the heavy capital investment required per unit to produce electricity. This makes it uneconomical to offer a choice of suppliers.

If you don't like one pair of shoes you can go down the street for another, but you can't get a refund on one kilowatt-hour in order to buy someone else's. There isn't anybody else's. Electricity is one commodity that is best distributed in a particular locality under monopoly franchise.

Why Bother?

Why bother to promote the sale of electric energy as long as it is a basic necessity with only one source? Surely it needs no selling. This would be true if the customer wanted only a constant amount of energy for lights as a replacement for the kerosene lamp. A flat charge per unit could be established to make the revenue cover the cost and the business could run happily by itself.

This is how it was in the days of the corner-garage utility diesel plant that supplied lighting for a few houses down the road, but times have changed. Electricity is now demanded for a multitude of domestic, commercial and industrial purposes. It is not only socially desirable but a very necessary commodity.

The corner garage has graduated to a utility supplying the energy on a large scale on a continuous basis. The price of a kilowatt-hour is now related to the amount of use made of the supply facilities rather than just a common price for every unit no matter how or where it is used. In other words, it is cheaper by the dozen.

Best Possible

As in other businesses the concept of marketing has been introduced into the electric energy business. It is the function related to monopoly utility's responsibility to provide the best possible electric service at the lowest possible cost consistent with sound business principles. If the utility business is to be sound, the price of its service must, as in any other business, be related to the cost of supply.

The cost of energy supply is proportional to the investment in generation, transmission and distribution facilities required to provide service and to the costs of maintaining and administering the system. The price to a retail domestic customer must reflect all these components of cost. A large industrial customer is justified in expecting the utility to say "we can sell it to you whole sale" since the energy can be delivered directly from the high voltage transmission system.

More Efficient

The large user usually makes more efficient use of energy, with more kilowatt-hours used per unit of investment in utility plant. Thus, if the energy output can be increased without adding further to plant capacity the unit cost of energy will come down.

As the cost of money increases and as wages and material prices go up, it becomes more necessary than ever to keep revenues ahead of expenses with increased sales. This is the only way to do it without raising rates. If a utility is otherwise operating according to sound business principles, the price of energy to the customer becomes one measure of the type of service it renders.

Any utility operating under exclusive franchise has an obligation to provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost by considering all factors. These are some of them: rate design, market development, industrial promotion, system planning and integration, and multi-purpose resource development.

Rate Design

Rate design is the art of establishing the price of electric energy that will return sufficient revenue to cover the cost of supplying the service, that will be fair and equitable and that will encourage the use of energy.

The first criterion is simple: if insufficient revenue is produced the rates must be raised. No one likes that. If the margin of surplus of revenues over costs increases the rates may be lowered.

To be fair and equitable a rate must result in each class of customer carrying a fair share of the cost of service.

A rate that encourages the use of energy is in keeping with the principle of "more use, lower cost." The price therefore is not just the same charge per unit no matter how many sold. Electric energy is cheaper by the dozen.

Important Thing

The important thing is to ensure that average revenue does not fall below average cost. Market development is another way to improve the efficiency and hence the cost of providing all classes of customers with electric service at the lowest possible cost.

There are customers on any utility's lines who are not using energy to the same extent as others, and many of them are using it at a level below the average. If such customers used electricity to a greater extent they would benefit both themselves and other customers by contributing to better utilization of system capacity. This in turn reduces unit costs, and as the line is held against rate increases.

Better Use

Therefore the utility advertises and promotes better use of electric energy. It's good business.

Industrial promotion is one way of selling energy in large quantities. Here the wholesale price may apply, but it must be arrived at properly and not set merely for the sake of getting rid of excess energy.

As long as the price is reasonable, the availability of large quantities of electricity is often more important to industries than the actual cost.

In most manufacturing industries, the cost of electric energy is less than 1 per cent of final product cost. Very few industries use electric energy to a greater degree. Fewer still are "energy intensive," in such that electric energy is considered as almost a raw material.

Usually Small

However, just because energy cost is usually a small component of the product value a utility cannot afford to be careless about its industrial rate design. The necessity to be fair, equitable and encouraging still applies.

In an industrial economy the abundance or scarcity of cheap electricity is likely to govern the rate of productivity and the standard of living.

System planning and integration are important in the process of increasing use, improving the efficiency and keeping down costs on electric utility systems.

Planning involves the scheduling of system capacity increases to meet the growing demand for energy. The type and location of future sources, thermal, hydro or nuclear, should be decided on the basis of intelligent planning and economics. The result should be progressive addition of new power tailored to the incremental increases in demand, working out from the main load centres until it becomes feasible to add more remote sources in larger blocks. System integration must be an essential part of such long-range planning.

Price in Line

Multi-purpose resource development is another way to get the best out of the source in order to keep the end price in line. A river basin for example, in terms of resources is not just a source of water. Its potential benefits are energy, fish, irrigation, recreation and water supply. When adequately controlled it can be regulated to prevent flooding. Each of these benefits has a value. The development of a river basin planned to recognize and give credit to all benefit values can achieve the best overall economic and social results as well as a lower net cost of electric energy.

There are many other chapters in the story of the electric utility business which cannot be covered in the space allotted here. From what has been said, however, it will be evident that the opening statement is correct:

No matter who owns, controls or operates it, the electrical energy business is public business. Realization of this fact is important to the future supply and price of energy in British Columbia.

Scottish Conductor Likes Pipes

Lovely—At Distance

"Don't get me wrong . . . I love the sound of bagpipes," said Scottish conductor Alexander Gibson, shortly after his arrival here yesterday.

"But, I think it's a good thing to listen to bagpipes out of doors. If you get them in a restaurant hall, it's murder. It really is," he said.

Mr. Gibson, 34-year-old conductor of the Scottish National Orchestra, will be guest conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra during three concerts this weekend.

He was surprised to learn that Victoria and Vancouver each have symphony orchestras. "I think it is unusual for a city the size of Victoria to have its own symphony orchestra.

"My orchestra serves the four principal cities, Glasgow with 1,125,000 population, Edinburgh with 750,000 and Aberdeen and Dundee, each with 300,000.

"A rail journey to any of these cities never exceeds three hours," said Mr. Gibson.

Kennedy an Excuse For Red Backdown?

OTTAWA (UPI)—Former prime minister Louis St. Laurent said yesterday that the inauguration of the new Kennedy administration in the United States may give Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and Cuba's Fidel Castro the opportunity to "save face" and modify their recent violent policies.

Political Fight Cuts Short Peace Parley in Belgium

BRUSSELS (UPI)—A hastily convened peace conference of rival political parties to end Belgium's 23-day strike broke up in disagreement last night minutes after it started. Socialist trade union leader Andre Renard, speaking to a rally of 15,000 strikers in Mons, immediately threatened a "new, more violent phase" of the strike aimed at overthrowing the government. The strikes already are costing Belgium $10,000,000 a day.

Wild Request for Wildcatter

GLASGOW (AP)—For two years Jock Macleod tried to catch a wildcat—any wildcat. Jock is a highland forester on the wooded shores of beautiful Loch Sunart. At the quest of Edinburgh's Zoological Garden he had hunted or made away like the wind. But one morning last week one of the traps he set and baited with rabbit closed on a wildcat. Jock found it next morning—a vicious, snarling, spitting specimen, every inch a wildcat.

The cat—about 1½ times the size of a domestic cat—us a male wildcat as its mate?

hade Jock a spitting, snarling farewell. Jock was glad to see it go. That, he thought, was the end of the wildcat question. But then Jock got a letter from the zoo, thanking him profusely for sending a female wildcat. There was a postscript: "Please, would you now get us a male wildcat as its mate?"

Puck Coach Anxious to Return To Big Provincial Penalty Box

MONTREAL (CP)—Claude Gauthier said Wednesday he wants to get back to St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary in a hurry so he won't miss the rest of the hockey season.

Couture, about to start serving a seven-year term for an $8,700 armed robbery, has been transferred to Montreal jail to wait sentence on another charge, a restaurant break-in.

He appeared before Judge T. A. Fontaine Wednesday and asked to be sentenced immediately. He explained that he had organized teams at the penitentiary and the schedule was about to start.

Business Partner to Pay Alleged Spy's Defence Bill

LONDON (Reuters)—A London businessman was reported Wednesday to have promised full financial support for the defence of Gordon Lonsdale, one of five persons held on charges under Britain's Official Secrets Act. Three of the five, including Lonsdale, were believed to be Canadians.

Pledge was made by Michael Houlbrooke Bowers, a real estate agent also in business with Lonsdale in the manufacture of a door lock.

'Be Radical'

Lecture to young Liberals was read yesterday by new Ontario MP Judy LaMarsh. Describing as "errant nonsense" reports that young Liberals can't make their views known, the lawyer said: "Be radical . . . stand up and say what you want because you're important to us . . . No one ever told me, 'You have no right to say that.'"

Deadline Cuts Short Liberals In Process of Policy-Making

OTTAWA (UPI)—Some 2,200 Liberals ran out of time last night in their effort to complete a new and vote-catching party platform for the next federal election.

Despite two extra plenary sessions running well into the night, the three-day rally of official delegates and "liberally-minded" guests wound up with little more than half of the material going through the complete mill.

The rally, which the Liberal brass claimed was the biggest of its kind in Canadian political history wound up officially last night.

BIGGEST STORM

The extra plenary sessions, forced by a group of university Liberals to get the rally's decision on foreign affairs, produced the biggest storm of the relatively low-pitched meeting. Canadian policy toward Communist China set it off.

China View Sets Off

A heated, hour-long debate, featured by numerous amendments and votes, produced agreement on a foreign policy platform that pledged an end to Canadian opposition to discussion of the Red China question at the United Nations without making a commitment on admission itself. Diplomatic recognition of the Peking government was not considered in the resolution.

Other major policy decisions:

● Unemployment: To meet what it called the worst crisis since the 1930s, the rally endorsed an eight-point program including immediate income tax reductions, increased social security payments, easing of credit and stepped up public works activity.

● Defence: The new Liberal program features a reduction in Canada's role in the NORAD to one of detection, identification and warning. It also declared the party's outright opposition to nuclear arms on Canadian soil, although it left the way open for use of them under NATO, provided such a move proved necessary.

● Health Insurance: The meeting promised immediate action by a Liberal government on a medical plan including extended hospital facilities, comprehensive doctor's care, prescribed drugs and medicine and diagnostic services.

● Trade: In a resolution leaning generally toward freer trade, the party suggested that Canada consider participation in "appropriate" regional trading blocs.

● Agriculture: A promise of "full parity" for initial wheat deliveries to the Canadian Wheat Board was the principal plank.

● Foreign investment: The rally favored a three-point program of tax incentives, revised investment regulations and national education as best means to encourage greater Canadian participation in the country's resources and industries.

● Education: A $10,000,000 program for scholarships and bursaries was the main proposal in this category. It would provide 10,000 four-year scholarships worth $1,000 a year.

Disclose 'True' Interest

OTTAWA (UPI)—Retailers of consumer goods should be required to disclose the "true" interest rate on all credit purchases, the Liberal rally decided yesterday.

Unanimous approval was given to a resolution proposing that such retailers be included under the provisions of the Interest Act of Canada which now requires the disclosure of the full interest rate on mortgages.

The rally declared that no one should be deported from Canada without the opportunity for a full court hearing except in cases involving national security.

J. W. Pickersgill said the Conservative government is trying to destroy the federal provincial tax-sharing system which was one of the greatest "acts of statesmanship" of the former Liberal government.

A pledge to assure equal educational opportunities for children of servicemen who died or were disabled in service was approved.

I was tired, old, dirty and suffering from rheumatic pains, such as burburs, aches around joints, psoriasis or psellitis. White Party Bloomers Start Press Giggling

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Spring will be a good year in terms of fashion for blondes, diets and dry cleaning business.

Spring collections shown Tuesday as a part of the New York Couture Group's fashion press week program emphasized colors especially flattering to the light-haired woman—shades of white, beige, orange or pink. They appeared in new styles by designers George Carmel, Jane Derby, Ann Klein or Donald Brooks.

Whether it was silk, linen or lightweight wool, or whether it was stitched into a two-piece suit or a dress with a jacket, it was almost always in an off-white shade. And that challenges a sooty city to send it quickly to the cleaners.

COUNT THOSE CALORIES

Returning to haunt those who predicted it wouldn't happen this year were figure-fitted garments. Bias-cut shaped bodices, tiny waistlines, and slim skirts showed up flatteringly on gaunt models. Those in the audience automatically whispered new diet resolutions.

However Donald Brooks, who designs for Townley, is sticking with the de-fitted look with raised waistline and a slightly flared skirt. A series of flat-bottomed dresses with free swinging coats in a variety of black and white and reverse prints is what he terms his Japanese influence collection.

Memlines, as short as last year 16 inches from the floor, got the scallop treatment in street and formal wear from both Brooks and Mrs. Klein.

Beige net lace cocktail dress features three rows of tucked net arranged in wide scallops around the skirt in this creation by Cell Chapman introduced yesterday at the preview of the New York Dress Institute.—(AP Wirephoto.)

Jane Derby's white party bodice. Another model wore bloomers inspired by her lacy white party giggles. A brave, pretty model wore knee-length chiffon in evening coat that buttoned down the back.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: You never got a letter like this in your life. I read in your column the other day a list of the things a girl 12 years old should be doing around the house. I'm 14 and my mother won't let me do any of the things you mentioned. I showed her your column and she said, "I don't care what Ann Landers says, I have to do things my own way."

I want to polish silverware, do the dinner dishes, dust and run the vacuum sweeper, but Mom won't let me. She says I don't do things the way she does and she never feels that the dishes are clean when I wash them. Even when I hang up my own clothes in the closet she hangs them over. She's forever "straightening" my drawers. Mom always has to have the last touch. Can you help me?—NOT CAPABLE.

Dear Not Capable: Your mother needs help—not you. She's a perfectionist who can't permit anyone to do anything because she needs the ego satisfaction which comes from doing everything herself. Tell her you know you can't do things as well as she because you haven't had her years of experience. Try to get her to understand that unless she gives you a chance to practice, you'll never learn. You should have assigned daily chores. If you don't pass Mom's inspection on the first try do it over until she's satisfied.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's business takes him out of the city one week out of every month. Is there something wrong with me because I don't mind? I'm happy to see him leave but I'm happy to see him come home.

When my friends ask, "How do you get along without your husband all week?" I reply "Just fine." They look at me as if I were a terrible woman. They seem to think I should be pining my heart out.

The week my husband is away I catch up on the mending, heavy cleaning, reading, visiting with friends he doesn't particularly enjoy—and it's fun. I'm independent, I go to

Linda Frances Wolfe Bride of R. T. Rodger

A pretty wedding was solemnized recently in Metropolitan United Church when Linda Frances Wolfe became the bride of Mr. Ralph Thomas Rodger.

Rev. E. Laura Butler officiated for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wolfe, 2077 Chaucer, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Rodger, 338 Vincent Avenue.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a dress of white nylon marquisette fashioned with lily-point sleeves, a sweetheart neckline and a shirred panel at the back of the gown. She wore an heirloom, handmade veil which had belonged to her grandmother and carried a bouquet of white roses and holly. She wore a pearl necklace and earrings.

The bride's attendants, her maid of honor, Miss Thea Smith, and her flowergirl, Lynda Dunham, both chose dresses of red-velvet and carried white chrysanthemums.

Best man was Mr. W. Michael Peddle and ushers were Mr. George Dunham and Mr. David H. Paterson.

At the reception at the Old Charming Inn, the bride's mother chose a rayon crepe dress of deep purple and the groom's mother chose a silk dress of old rose. Mr. A. Calvert proposed a toast to the bride.

For an up-island honeymoon, the new Mrs. Rodger changed into a pale green wool dress with black accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodger will reside in Victoria.

WMS Starts Final Year

The January meeting of Centennial Women's Missionary Society heard the reports of a most successful year's activity in which treasurer, Mrs. J. Hopkins, reported the allocation had been reached and $20 sent to the building fund.

The pastor, Dr. S. Parsons, conducted the installation of officers stating that this would be the final year for the Women's Missionary Society as it now exists. In 1962 the forming of The United Church Women's organization will take place. Following a request by Dr. Parsons, Mrs. M. Waldern and Mrs. F. Decker were chosen as a committee for further study of the new organization.

Reports of refugee work were given by Mrs. Jamieson and Mrs. W. Chapman. The study Book was reviewed by Mrs. F. Decker, who with Mrs. Jamieson, was chosen as delegate to the Presbyterian meeting Feb. 7th and 8th in First United Church.

LIBERALS

The Liberal Women's Forum will meet on Friday, Jan. 13, at 2 p.m. at headquarters. Hon. R. W. Mayhew will address the gathering.

Margaret and Tony Steal the Show

By A. E. PEDERSEN

OSLO (UPI) — Norway's Princess Astrid, 28, will be married today to a divorced commoner. But last night she was sharing honors with Britain's Princess Margaret who married a commoner eight months ago.

A crowd of persons including Astrid and her husband-to-be, Johan Martin Ferner, 34, a third-part owner of an Oslo men's clothing store, was on hand at the airport yesterday to welcome Margaret and her husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones, when they arrived from London.

King Olav and Norwegian Crown Prince Harald were there, too, but it was Margaret and Armstrong-Jones who stole the show and seemed to draw most of the crowd's cheers. Late, there was a chant of "Tony! Tony!" outside the Royal palace.

There was no sign on this wedding eve of the criticism that erupted, especially from church circles, when Astrid's engagement to Ferner was announced last November.

The Norwegian church frowned on a church marriage for divorced persons, although it is not forbidden.

Ferner parted amicably from his first wife several years ago without a scandal. However, many leading Norwegians and some of the press questioned the wisdom of a royal princess marrying a divorced man.

Bishop Johannes Smemo of Oslo announced that if he were asked to marry the couple he would refuse. The royal family solved that by not asking him. The marriage will be performed by Trondheim Bishop Arne Fjellbu, who officiated at the religious ceremony for Olav's coronation. The little church of Asker, outside Oslo, will be the scene of the ceremony.

Unlike Princess Margaret, who retained her status as Royal Highness after marrying Armstrong-Jones, Astrid no longer will be entitled to the address Royal Highness. She will be known as Princess Fru (Mrs.) Ferner.

Members of several European royal houses were in Oslo. Danish Crown Princess Margrethe arrived 20 minutes after Princess Margaret. The British princess waited at the airport to welcome her.

Other royalty included the houses of Denmark, Sweden, Belgium and Luxembourg. Princess Josephine Charlotte and Prince Jean of Luxembourg came yesterday by train as did Sweden's Princess Margaretha. Prince Bertil of Sweden arrived from Stockholm by plane.

The ceremony today will mark the second time a Norwegian princess has married a commoner. King Olav's oldest daughter, Princess Ragnhild, and Erling Lorentzen, a shipping company heir, were married in 1953. The Lorentzens live in Rio de Janeiro, where he operates a family-owned bottled gas business.

Women in 1861—And Women Today

"The Roman God, Janus, for whom this month is named, is pictured with two heads, one looking backward and one looking forward. Perhaps by looking back he received, as well as knowledge and wisdom, the courage to look forward."

These were the words of Mrs. Phyllis Graveley, executive director of the YWCA in Victoria, when she spoke to had to work and might have been employed anywhere from 10 to 16 hours a day. They received much less pay than men because everybody knew that women were inferior and worth less than men. There were a few pioneers running their own businesses, but they were exceptions and considered not quite nice or ladylike.

"Who would have thought," she said, "that within the hundred years, a new role would be ushered in for women and that these very women would begin to change the status of women in the world. Those who came after them saw the tremendous repercussions on the relationship of men and women in every walk of life, in marriage, the family and employment, until it is recognized that the level of a nation's culture is measured by the status of its women."

UN VISITOR Mrs. Graveley returned in November from a visit to the United Nations General Assembly in New York. She was under the sponsorship of the Business and Professional Women's Club on a UN Fellowship.

Her particular interest at the United Nations was to bring the United Nations to Victoria and to explain the part played by women's organizations at the UN. She reiterated her topic, that the United Nations listens to common citizens, and that the women of Canada, of Victoria, could make their contribution through their work with organizations, and the UN would listen to them.

Mrs. A. J. Tullis thanked the speaker. The next meeting will be held Tuesday, Jan. 24 in the Empress Hotel ballroom, when Prof. Tony Emery will speak on "Are Canadians Cultured?"

Interesting Turnabout

Among the Tchanbull tribes of New Guinea, Mrs. Graveley discovered from speaking to women at the UN, women completely dominate the men. They go off to work each day and leave their menfolk at home to play the flute, decorate themselves with flowers and plan amusement for the women when they return tired and hungry after a day's work making nets and catching fish. The Tchanbull women are affectionately scornful of their men, whom they regard as rather frivolous, emotional creatures given to quarrelling and endless chatter, and gossiping about their neighbors.

the Women's Canadian Club in the ballroom of the Empress Hotel Wednesday afternoon.

CENTURY AGO

Mrs. Graveley's topic was "The UN Listens To You." In 1861, how did women feel, as human beings?

As citizens, they had no rights whatever and as wives could not vote or hold public office. Inevitably, some women

Glad You Checked?

By M. V. CHENUT, FRHS

It isn't a bad idea at this season of the year to check over the gladiolus corms and dahlia tubers in storage. All kinds of things can happen to them, and if you can catch trouble at its onset, you can usually head it off.

When you examine the glad bulbs, you will probably find a number of little white bumps or nodules forming on the base, around the rim of the root scar. Quite a few readers write to me every year about this, fearing their bulbs are attacked by some pest or disease, but there is nothing to worry about. The nodules are merely the beginnings of the new roots and indicate that the bulbs have broken their dormancy—their winter sleep—and are ready to start growing as soon as warmth and moisture are available.

Sprouting from the top of the bulb, however, is a horse from a different milk wagon. For this indicates that the bulbs have actually started into growth and far too early for their own good. This occurs when the storage temperature is too high and, if it is allowed to continue, the shoots will elongate, becoming skinny and blanching in the darkness, like the sprouts from a sack of potatoes stored in a dark, too-warm basement.

Fat white shoots showing on the tops of the glad bulbs this early in the year are a pretty sure sign that the storage place isn't cool enough and all you can do is go prospecting with a thermometer to find a cooler place, so the bulbs can be held back and growth retarded until just before planting-out time. Try to find a spot where the temperature remains below 45 degrees, but free from actual frost.

I have had several SOS calls recently about dahlia tubers sprouting in storage, and here again, the trouble is too much warmth. If the sprouted shoots are short, no harm is done and, by shifting the tubers into a cooler place, the rate of growth can be slowed down to the point where the sprouts won't be too long and unmanageable at planting time. If they get away on you and are already too long when discovered, cut them off one leaf or leaf scale above the point where they emerge from the tuber and all will be well. Unfortunately, you can't do this with gladiolus—if you break or cut off the sprout, you get no plant from the bulb.

In examining dahlia tubers, keep a sharp lookout for sprouts with a distorted appearance. Occasionally, instead of a normal sprout, a warty growth appears which looks a little like a cauliflower. This is a disease and a very contagious one, and any such tubers should be burned immediately.

Getting back to gladiolus for a moment, these plants are almost impossible to transplant successfully once they are rooted and growing. In the hope of growing some especially early flowers, I have tried several times to start them indoors, as you would tomato plants, planting the bulbs in flats of soil and transplanting later to open ground, but the gambles never came off.

Nowadays, with the new consumable plant pots made of fibre, such a deal is quite possible. In fibre pots, the plants are never really transplanted at all, as pot and all are set out at planting time. With no disturbance of the roots, the plants go right ahead without any check to their growth. The trick is to keep them very cool and in plenty of sunshine during their indoor growth.

Murder by Decimal Points

1,100 Viewers Decide
Fare for 170,000,000

A. C. Nielsen Company, the closest thing we have in modern times to a witch doctor, has issued his latest television ratings and, my, they're interesting. The top 10 doesn't contain a single new show and most of them—like Wagon Train and Have Gun, Will Travel—have been on the air since the Chinese invented gunpowder (which is also on the list).

The conclusion to which Madison Avenue and Variety and a number of other distinguished arbiters of our taste, instantly jumped was that the public likes the old shows and doesn't rate to anything new on television. However my own conclusion is somewhat different and more basic. I have always felt that the Nielsen ratings reflected public taste about as closely as a tea leaf reading by a blind gypsy.

Nielsen takes his sample by inserting little gadgets called audimeters in a minute sample of television sets in the U.S. (1,100 which is supposed to measure the tastes of about 170,000,000 people. "I'll bet you," I remarked aloud to myself, "that luncheon organization hasn't changed the homes those audimeters have been in since they started the sample."

I immediately woke up my ever-vigilant — well, almost ever-vigilant — Operative X-13 and told her to get cracking. Seconds later she was on the phone to Chicago, where the A. C. Nielsen Company night.

crouches, manufacturing decimal points and destroying television careers.

A jittery public relations director named H. Wayne Busman got on the phone and gibbered roughly as follows: "We have 4,000 people employed full time with this company, not just an old man with a white beard and a crystal ball. Mr. Crosby is invited to visit with us as long as he likes. We would rather nothing be written about the company than have someone write some things which are not factually true."

Out of all verbiage several truths emerged, in spite of Mr. Busman. There are only 1,100 audimeters. The audimeters' homes are mostly permanent. Some changes are made to measure population shifts.

Could Mr. Busman estimate how many audimeters had been changed since 1850? No, he couldn't. Nor would he try.

In other words, pursued Operative X-13 (who has been called a bloodhound with sex appeal), it's not the nation which can't get enough of Gunsmoke. It's about 12 people who had their sets turned on and tuned to Gunsmoke that night.

Operative X-13 pointed out that both the public and a good many TV shows were being harmed—the public by stuffing them up to the ears with cowboy shows, the performers by having their programs dropped. "Mr. Busman, are you watched or checked by any government agency or is your information just taken by the clients as fact?" she asked.

"No, no one checks our information. This is an elaborate process. Please come to Chicago. You can't possibly understand exactly what we do over the phone."

Well, we can't come to Chicago. However, if Nielsen wants to come to us we'll be happy to explain how a newspaper works. I'll even be happy to explain Nielsen's operation to Nielsen. His rating, for instance, is headed by Wagon Train with a 36.9. That means, Nielsen, the same 406 people who were watching Wagon Train in 1957 are still watching it. Frankly I think those 406 people ought to be scientifically sampled and all those who voted for McKinley in the last election ought to be dropped and replaced by some up-to-date people who voted for, say, Harry Truman.

LET'S TALK

By Rudolf Flesch

A few weeks before Christmas, David Brinkley reported from Japan on the tremendous business department stores were doing in Tokyo. The Japanese are Buddhists, he said, but they've taken up Christmas giving with vim and vigor.

Early in December each company pays its employees a large year-end bonus, all of which is immediately spent, North American fashion, on gifts for children, relatives and friends.

Magi, Star Alien

The whole thing—the three magi, the star, the manger, the shepherds in the fields—couldn't be more alien to them as they push their way through the crowds in search of cameras, toy trains and gift items of all kinds.

The same argument is being made every year about our own Christmas season with its department store Santas and office parties, its unadorned of the post office with mass-produced Christmas cards, its aluminum trees and artificial snow. It's easy to make fun of all these things and to grumble—Scrooge-like—about the increasing commercialization of religion. But there's another side to it and the Japanese Buddhist Christmas season points it up. The obvious fact that the sheer spread of Christmas business draws millions of people into Christmas activities who otherwise wouldn't have taken part in it.

Now It's Different

Fifty or 100 years ago Christmas was celebrated only by those who felt like it: Buddhists, Jews, agnostics and even lukewarm Christians paid little or no attention.

Now it's different. Christmas has become inescapable: the whole world celebrates it regardless of race, creed or color. Somehow, paradoxically, the profit motive has brought about what preaching and missionary work could never accomplish — it has forced Buddhists, Jews and unbelievers to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Christ.

And don't say it's all superficial and meaningless. It isn't—you can't give presents and send out cards and wish people a merry Christmas without getting somehow infected by the spirit of the whole thing. "And on earth peace, good will toward men

Sophisticated Pat Set to Invade Vegas Night Club

By RHEILAN GRAHAM

Pat Boone, who at one time wouldn't kiss his leading lady, has become so sophisticated he is considering singing in a Las Vegas night club, following his first Los Angeles date at the Coconut Grove in June.

No wonder Johnny Mathis speaks so highly of his manager, Helen Noga. Her investments of his earnings grossed him close to $1,000,000 in 1960. And even though we always speak so lightly of millions in this column, it's still a heck of a lot of money.

The girl they want to play the model in the screen life of Madame (Coco) Chanel is none other than her long-time customer, Redheaded Suzie Parker. Ever since she could afford it Suzie has bought all her clothes from Chanel. The great dressmaker will be portrayed on the silver screen and on the stage by Ronald Russell. With the great Lerner and Loewe to write the musical.

Tennessee Williams would like Geraldine Page and Paul Newman to repeat their "Sweet Bird of Youth" Broadway date on the London stage. The author has been rewriting her role and adding scenes. Miss Page told me on the set of her current "Summer and Smoke" movie version of Williams' play.

England's top comedian, Norman Wisdom, is going to the U.S. to appear with his new movie, "There Was a Crooked Man." British comedians are very popular these days. So are British movies. Of course, we see only the best of both.

Seems to me that Janet Leigh and Shirley Jones, both of whom are sure to be Academy-Award nominated, will be fighting it out for the "best supporting actress" Oscar—Shirley for "Elmer Gantry" and Janet for "Psycho."

With Dead Arns back in Hollywood, ex-wife Loretta Bell says no, very emphatically, when asked if his recent visit to see her in New York meant a possible reconciliation. But it still wouldn't surprise me.

The most romantic twosome in Europe, British star Dirk Bogarde and his "Song Without End" leading lady, Capucine. She spent the holidays with Dirk and his parents at his country home.

'Teach Mature Thought'

The next generation must be taught above all else to think maturely and not react to force—a state never achieved before—if the world is to survive nuclear annihilation, Dr. Brock Chisholm said this week.

The former World Health Organization director told the Prospect Lake Community Association: "There is no possibility from now on of anyone winning a war."

And mankind, like prehistoric animals, may become extinct because it has not shown signs of adapting to changing conditions.

Great problems such as food shortage and population explosion will face future generations who no longer can resort to solution by war without wiping man from the face of the earth.

"The next generation must be able to live harmoniously in a changing total environment," said Dr. Chisholm. "The responsibility of this generation is to help our children grow up to change with our feeling guilty or disloyal to their ancestors."

New York Strike Halts All Freight

NEW YORK (UPI)—Virtually all freight shipments to this city were tied up Wednesday when truck drivers and railroad freight handlers refused to cross picket lines set up by ferry and tug boat crews.

The 680 striking ferry and tug boat men walked out in a World Reliance strike, demanding for a 15 per cent pay hike.

Baha'i Faith Traveller To Talk Here

World traveller Mrs. Peggy Ross, recently returned from a visit to Israel, will show color slides of that country and speak on the Baha'i Faith in the YWCA club room at 8 p.m. Friday.

Mrs. Ross has served several years as national treasurer and national secretary of the Canadian National Baha'i Spiritual Assembly, and is one of two Canadian members of an advisory board responsible for the development and maintenance of Baha'i teaching plans in the West.

Donald MacLaren, 2221 Tyron Road, Sidney, will speak at another Baha'i sponsored public meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The meeting to honor his religious day will also be held in the YWCA club room.

No-Strings China Aid Urged by U.K. Paper

MANCHESTER (Reuters) — The Guardian yesterday joined other British newspapers in a call for Western aid to help overcome Communist China's food shortage.

The newspaper emphasizes any Western offer must be non-political and criticizes suggestions for a policy of "no grain without free elections."

Vancouver

Boy Vanishes Two Die In Pelting Rain

VANCOUVER (CP)—Days of pelting rain lapped into a maddening drizzle Wednesday over the Lower Mainland.

The storm, which dumped nearly 10 inches of rain at one recording spot in 72 hours, took the lives of two and perhaps three persons.

Police continued a search for James Carr, 8, who disappeared on his way home from school in West Vancouver Tuesday—a distance of 2½ blocks. Open ditches paralleled the municipality's hillside.

James Lohar of Abbotsford was killed when he lost control of his bicycle on a slippery road and crashed into a truck.

CLEARING DITCH

Mrs. Jean Moffitt, 56, of West Vancouver, died of a heart attack as she cleared a ditch near her home.

North Vancouver district estimated municipal damage $75,000. Many expensive homes were washed inside and out by flood water.

WORST OVER

Worst of the storm is over. Rain will continue occasionally today.

The bursting of a 2,000,000-gallon reservoir in North Vancouver swelled Mosquito Creek to a level higher than that of 1955 when many houses floated away.

WASHED DOWN

Boulders and tree stumps were washed down the creek and over the banks onto roads. Many were closed. Communications and utilities were cut.

Floods Bypass Victoria

British Columbia's Lower Mainland, and especially Vancouver's North Shore, may be having major troubles with flooding caused by increased rain, but nothing of the sort is indicated in the Greater Victoria area.

Rainfall has remained fairly moderate in this district, weatherman William Mackie said yesterday.

Heaviest fall in any record daily period, he said, was 28 inches Jan. 4.

No reports of any flooding problems have been received by police.

B.C. Plans to Revise Rail Timber Berths

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government plans a reclassification of timber berths once granted to the railways by the federal government, in a move aimed at increasing the amount of timber available to small logging operators. Lands and Forests Minister Williston said Wednesday.

The minister's plan, outlined in an address to the B.C. Truck Loggers' Association convention here, would classify as crown timberlands — or public forests — timber now considered privately owned.

The report's significance was pointed up by Mr. Williston's statement that in the coastal forest area from Prince Rupert south there now is practically no excess timber available.

20 MILES WIDE

The timberland concerned in the reclassification was granted to the railways by the federal government prior to 1930 and extended 20 miles in width along the railway right-of-way.

The province took over the property in 1930 and it was agreed that the timber berths would be treated as private timber lands. Mr. Williston said 177 berths covering 381,225 acres still are in good standing.

At the time of purchase, the buyer paid a set price for this specific timber plus a bonus on the amount of timber in the berth that was 10 inches in diameter or larger.

UNEXPECTED ADVANTAGE

Mr. Williston said Wednesday that "a contract is a contract," but it is obvious that this situation gives the timber berth holder an unexpected economic advantage if the view is held that the entire crop in perpetuity was purchased rather than the volume that was over the 10-inch standard at the time of purchase.

"Also," he said, "it represents a great loss of potential Crown forest revenue through loss of stumpage."

"It is our intention to re-examine this whole timber berth question on the basis that the original contract applies only to the timber 10 inches at the time of the sale by the Dominion."

Forest Industry Told

Prepare to Grab More of Market

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian forest industry must be prepared to take its share of an expanding world demand or it may lose some of its present markets, federal Forests Minister Hugh John Fleming said Wednesday.

It has been estimated, he said, that world demand for forest products will increase by 140 per cent during the next 10 or 15 years.

"We feel that unless we take our share of that expanded market, we might lose some of the markets we already have," he said. "We must be ready to meet the new demand."

Knights of Malta Attend Investiture

OTTAWA (CP) — Knights of Malta from across Canada attended ceremonies here Wednesday in connection with investiture of newly-admitted knights and dames. Ceremonies were held in the chapel of the University of Ottawa by the Roman Catholic organization.

42 Drown Three Live

ALGERIAN, Spain (UPI)—A small, overcrowded boat carrying Moroccan Jews to a new life in Israel foundered Wednesday off the northern coast of Spanish Morocco. Forty-two men, women and children were drowned.

The three known survivors, the Spanish captain and two Spanish crew members, clung to one life preserver for hours in high seas until rescued by a Spanish fishing vessel.

CCF Chief:

Tories Want Vote

TORONTO (CP)—Progressive Conservatives are doing everything possible in preparation for a 1961 election, CCF leader Hazen Argue said Wednesday.

Mr. Argue guessed that in March or April Prime Minister Diefenbaker will look over the situation and, if he thinks he can win, will call an election for about June.

EVERY STEP

Mr. Diefenbaker has stated he does not contemplate a 1961 election, but the CCF leader said he has been taking every step necessary for calling one.

"The prospect of continuing higher unemployment would be an encouragement for an early election," he added.

AS CONFUSED

Discussing the current Liberal rally at Ottawa, Mr. Argue said the Liberals "look about as confused as ever."

"The only new policies they have come up with are some they are borrowing from us, as much as seven years old."

CANADA'S ROLE

Mr. Argue said he is pleased to see Liberal leader Pearson agree with the CCF that Canada's role in the North American Air Defence Command should be modified, but: "Where was Mr. Pearson when Norad was set up?"

Old Fighter Reaches 100

MONTREAL (CP)—Charles Rackstraw, who had to be about his age to fight in the First World War and went on to take up flying at the age of 38, celebrated his 100th birthday Wednesday at his home in suburban Lachine.

Mr. Rackstraw attributed his long life to moderation.

British Firms Bid Today For B.C. Job

Six representatives of two British engineering firms have flown here to make a joint bid as consultants to the B.C. Energy Board in its detailed study of the Peace and Columbia River power projects. Civil engineers Sir Alexander Gibb and electrical engineers Merz and McLellan will make a detailed and formal offer to the board Thursday.

Surveyors Meet Here

Two-day convention of the Land Surveyors of B.C. will open at the Empress Hotel at 9:30 a.m. today and will be attended by surveyors from across Canada and throughout B.C. One of the new devices to be demonstrated at the meeting is a geodimeter which can measure distances up to four miles at night.

World Group Urges Car Safety Belts

Dr. Ulf Brunius said people have four times the chance of surviving if they are held inside the car.

Queen Elizabeth
... jewelry worth millions

To Dazzle India

Jewels Go With Queen

LONDON (UPI)—Queen Elizabeth will take nearly $30,000,000 worth of jewels with her when she and Prince Philip leave Jan. 20 for a visit to India, Pakistan, Nepal and Iran.

The gems are not insured because they are considered irreplaceable. Heading the list of traveling crown jewels is the most costly diadem in the world, a circlet of four huge diamond designs incorporating the English rose, Scottish thistle and Irish shamrock. It is mounted over diamond scroll work enclosed in two rows of Indian pearls.

PRICELESS—The cost? "Priceless" is all Buckingham Palace can say. The diadem was made originally for King George IV to wear at his coronation and can be worn only by a reigning monarch.

a diamond necklace worn by her great-grandmother, Queen Victoria. Queen Elizabeth wears it with the necklace worn with it is almost as fabulous. It has extra diamond drops, the largest of which is a pendant weighing 23 carats. It originally was one of the great treasures of Lahore and was presented to Victoria by the East India Company in 1851. The queen's bodyguard, Chief Inspector Albert Perkins, of Scotland Yard, is responsible for the treasure. He will be assisted by Capt. J. Gorman, chief security officer of the British Overseas Airways Corporation.

Anxious Nations Manoeuvre To Stop Civil War in Laos

LONDON (Reuters)—Diplomats of a dozen nations manoeuvred Wednesday to stamp out civil war in Laos before it could spread to Cambodia.

Britain shifted its line closer to Canada's call for the dispatch of a stop-gap peace mission to the southeast Asia nation, pending an international conference on the crisis.

Cambodia, a neutral neighbor of Laos, announced that France, Russia and North Vietnam have accepted its proposal for a 14-nation meeting to discuss the Laotian problem. But in Paris, the French government disclosed that President de Gaulle's reply merely said the Cambodian suggestion "assuredly requires careful study."

In Washington, a state department spokesman said the United States is giving "earnest consideration" to the proposal. The British also are reported "studying" the plan.

Tiny Laos Warns Russia Of 'Appropriate Action'

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—The tiny kingdom of Laos told the mighty Soviet Union Wednesday to halt its airlift of supplies to the Communist Pathet Lao guerrillas or it would "take appropriate action." Later four fighters headed to Red airfields and returned without their rockets.

CALL ELECTION—WE'LL WIN PEARSON'S DARE TO JOHN D

Canada Likes Left Wing Liberal Rally Proves It

By DAVE MCINTOSH
OTTAWA (CP)—Anyone for right wing?

The evidence continued to pile up yesterday that, federally at least, Canadians are nearly all left-wingers. Some right-wingers may be around but there hasn't been a peep out of them of late.

At its national rally, Liberals took another left turn with advocacy of a medical care plan, a start on free education at all levels, more federal aid for western farmers and the like.

This poses an awkward problem for the New Party. It may be forced to move even farther left—so far—that it might get adverse reaction from moderate left-wingers. The CCF has long been used to crowding from the Liberals. Former leader M. J. Coldwell used to say he didn't mind any party kidnapping CCF planks as long as needed reforms started.

Supposedly, the Progressive Conservative party is the right wing in Canada. But under Prime Minister Diefenbaker it has been pulled farther and farther left.

His announcement of a royal commission to study health and his federal aid for Prairie farmers are examples. There have been reports some Conservatives are unhappy about his leftist policies but nobody is strong enough to oppose him openly.

By a process of elimination it can be said Social Credit is the only right-wing party. But it has no representation in Parliament now.

Police Suspect Foul Play

Child Critically Hurt

85th Arrest

Cell 'Home' To Heiress

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—Uranium heiress Mrs. Lucile Boyd Gallegos Gillham celebrated her 35th birthday in spectacular manner Wednesday.

When police arrested her early Wednesday morning, they said her car was pointed the wrong way in a one-way street and had collided in order with a Cadillac, Lincoln and a Chevrolet.

It was Mrs. Gillham's 85th arrest in the city of Spokane alone.

She was booked on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving, having no operator's licence and being drunk in public.

Then she was taken to the women's section of the city jail where she has a private television set, purchased several years ago to make her stay behind bars more pleasant.

Officers said Mrs. Gillham told them she was returning from Idaho and a pre-birthday party when she got turned around in the city's one-way street system. Two passengers in her car were slightly injured.

Mrs. Gillham, then Mrs. Gallegos, first hit the headlines when she and her younger brother received $340,000 for the rights to uranium discovered on their inherited Indian reservation land near Wellpinit, Wash.

New Professor Joins Outcry Over Welfare

VANCOUVER (CP)—A university of British Columbia professor Wednesday added his voice to the growing number of critics calling for an investigation into B.C. welfare services.

Prof. W. G. Dixon of the UBC school of social work said: "The Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows B.C. leads the parade in social problems in Canada. . . . An investigation would be desirable at any time."

Prof. Dixon said rising unemployment has brought a special dilemma as the demand for social assistance to family financing has swamped existing services.

Black Tells
New Critics

Welfare Minister Welsby Black stolidly refused to answer criticisms of his department yesterday as more and more people added fuel to the fire in demanding an investigation into the charges made by former B.C. superintendent of child welfare Miss Ruby McKay.

"At the risk of repeating myself, no comment," said Mr. Black.

Miss McKay, who quit her post Dec. 31, charged last week that she resigned because of the government's restrictive policies towards welfare.

Mercy Flight From Ucluelet

RCMP investigators will fly to Ucluelet from here today to investigate circumstances surrounding critical injuries sustained by a three-year-old youngster rushed to Victoria by plane and taxi last night.

In poor condition is Leslie Hill, daughter of logger Bruce Hill of Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island. Dr. H. R. McDiarmid of Tofino said the child was suffering from a fractured skull.

Circumstances surrounding the infliction of the injuries were not known here last night, but RCMP spokesman said "there is a strong indication that there is something wrong here."

FOUL PLAY HINTED
Police believe that foul play may be involved, but refused to elaborate.

The tot is believed to have been hurt Monday.

Public health nurse Myrtle Saxton, an unidentified pilot and a veteran taxi driver combined forces to rush the three-year-old girl from the Tofino hospital to Royal Jubilee Hospital last night.

CALL FOR ESCORT
Taxi driver G. E. Armstrong of Port Alberni who made the 130-mile trip in 2½ hours, pulled into a service station on Douglas and phoned for a police escort through the city.

Armstrong said the pilot, whose name he didn't know, did a wonderful job "bringing the plane in and landing when it was dark and in rough water."

LINCOLN WHITE
... need us

Only Unity Can Save Continent

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—State department spokesman Lincoln White said yesterday the defence of North America can be assured only through Canadian-American co-operation.

"We need Canada in this effort and they need us," he told a press conference. White was commenting on a statement by Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson that Canada should alter its role in North American Air Defence Command, doing away with interceptors—manned or unmanned—but continuing to co-operate closely with the U.S. in matters of air-detection, identification and warning.

"Let me say that Mike Pearson is an old friend of the United States," White told the press conference.

Use of A-Arms in Canada Still Under Consideration

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Harkness repeated Wednesday that use of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil is "still under consideration and is a matter to be determined by the government."

The minister made the statement denying a remark that Canada's participation in NORAD does not require use of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil.

LESTER D. PEARSON
... New Party hit

U.S. Fears Rising

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

American defence planners view with rising concern expressions of sentiment in Canada favoring a loosening of military ties with the U.S.

A Pentagon informant said there seems to be an element of "resignation" in Canada towards meeting the nuclear threat.

His comment was on Liberal leader Pearson's call that Canada do away with interceptors. (See below.)

An American authority said the Pearson statement could not be "kissed off" as an isolated Canadian opinion. CCF Leader Hazen Argue has called NORAD a waste of time because there is no defence against hydrogen bombs.

American planners say they are wondering "just how far Canada really wants to go."

Keep NORAD Say Liberals

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Liberal rally last night rejected a proposal that Canada withdraw completely from the NORAD Air Defence Command.

Instead, it adopted a platform favoring the elimination of Canada's interception role and its limitation to detection, identification and warning.

The resolution was in line with the proposal put before the rally two nights ago by party leader Lester Pearson.

'Sooner The Better'

OTTAWA (UPI)—Lester Pearson, given "the entire confidence" of the Liberal party as its leader, last night challenged Prime Minister Diefenbaker to call a federal election, which he said the Liberals would win.

Pearson, who received a 10-minute ovation from 2,000 Liberals at the party's three-day national rally ended, called the rally "a magnificent demonstration of the resurgent strength and vitality of our party."

PROGRESSIVE
"The policies worked out here," he said, "put before the Canadian people a responsible and progressive set of national policies."

Pearson said the policies were worked out "in a way that gives ample opportunity for the kind of careful consideration on which Canadians can make their choice when an election does come."

"I hope that day will come very soon, and may the prime minister bring it on, the sooner the better."

STRIKING LIST
Pearson said the government's "list of mistakes of omission and commission is long and striking."

He charged the Diefenbaker administration with "failure to even understand, let alone deal with the tragic problem of unemployment" and the issue of economic growth.

The Canadian people, Pearson said, "are becoming more and more aware that, while the present ministers may be skillful in the advertising arts of politics, they are not efficient or decisive in the far more important business of government."

VERY SURVIVAL
"With our security and prosperity, our very survival at stake, sound and steady and efficient government is more important than smart politics," he added.

Pearson described the link of the CCF and the Canadian Labor Congress into the New Party as "a marriage of convenience" built on the CCF's "virtual disappearance."

AMALGAMATE
"We are told it is to be a party in which the individualistic farmers of the West are to amalgamate with big union leaders and socialist intellectuals."

"This, I suggest, will be a marriage of inconvenience, of conflicting interests."

"There is no need for any occupational party in this country as long as the Liberal party remains liberal and for reform."

World Ignores Starving Congo

ROME (UPI)—The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has failed to find international support for a relief program to halt Congo famine which is killing 200 men, women and children a day.

FAO officials came away empty-handed from an emergency meeting—its third since Christmas—with 24 member nations at its world headquarters here.

Experts have estimated it will take $3,000,000 worth of food plus tens of thousands of dollars in transportation costs to relieve extreme starvation among 150,000 Baluba refugees in the Congo over the next six months.

The FAO was advised just three weeks ago by UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld it would have to assume responsibility for halting the famine because the situation had deteriorated beyond the capacity of the UN Congo operation to deal with it.

Thus far only $750,000 in aid has been promised.

Cap from Moose 'Bell' May Start New Fad

WEST HOLME — An ardent hunter here may have started a fad similar to the Davey Crockett coon skin cap that was the rage among kids a few years ago.

Dolphus Holman, a dairy farmer, like every other hunter who has chased the huge northern moose in sub-zero weather, suffered from cold ears, and so he decided to make himself a hat from the "bell" that hangs from the animal's neck.

"A lot of people have shown an interest in it," he said yesterday. "I've taken it out of the alum solution and every once in a while I knead it to keep it from going stiff. When it's plenty loose I'll have a professional seamstress fix it up with lining and all."

Mr. Holman got his chance to make the hat after bagging an 800-pound moose last month 40 miles north of Prince George on the Fraser River. The cap was his own invention, he said — he had never heard of another.

PORT ALBERNI — An invitation will go from the Chamber of Commerce here to the B.C. Lions, asking the team to use this district's facilities for pre-season training.

The chamber reported that school board of District 70 will co-operate in making dressing rooms and the centennial oval available for use of the Lions if the invitation is accepted. Mayor Loran Jordan has also indicated that the city's swimming pool and other facilities would be placed at the service of the team.

For several years Lions have gone to Kelowna for their pre-season workouts.

QUALIGUM BEACH — A provisional budget of $25,800 was authorized by village council at the first meeting of 1961.

Committees appointed by Donald M. Beaton, chairman, are: Finance, H. C. Good and William MacKay; public works, MacKay and Edward MacMillan; waterworks, ALBERNI — Rites will be held in Stevens funeral home Thursday for Mrs. Maggie Smith Spark Paul, a resident of Alberni for the past 34 years, who passed away on January 10 in West Coast General Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Paul was born in Dundee, Scotland, 82 years ago. She leaves her husband, Allan Paul, at home; one son, William, Alberni; three daughters, Mrs. A. (Christie) Gilmore, and Mrs. E. J. (Margaret) Allen, Alberni; Mrs. William (Mary) Austin, Ysibou; five grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

PORT ALBERNI — First Red Cross blood donor clinic for 1961 will be held here next week in Port Legian Hall.

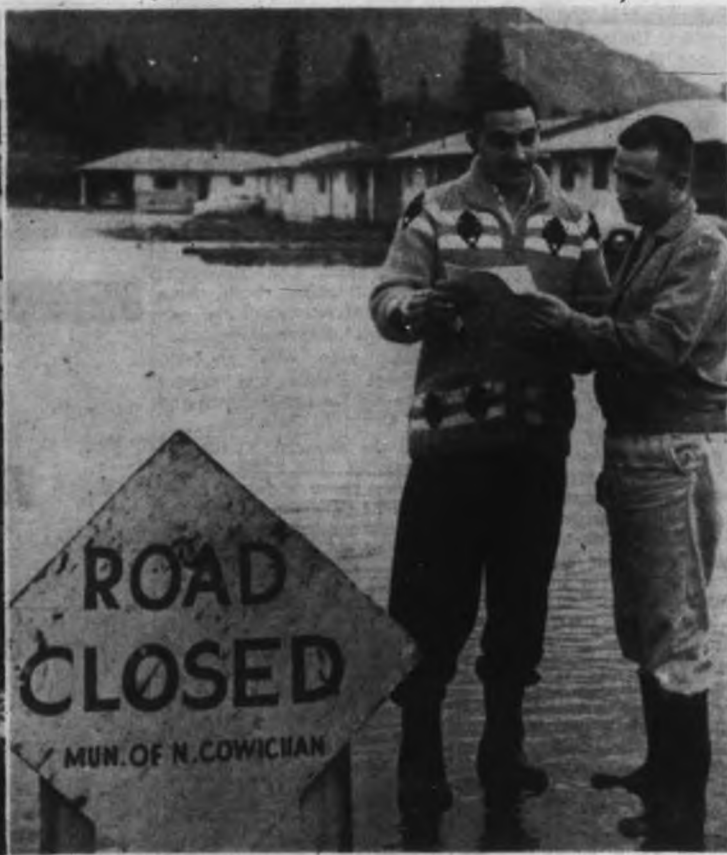

The district's junior chamber of commerce is sponsoring the clinic, offering free transportation for anyone requiring the service. Anyone wishing a ride to and from the clinic is asked to phone 1318.

DUNCAN — Thieves took 400 feet of Venetian blind-cord among an assortment of goods stolen from St. Catherine's Indian School Tuesday night. Reported stolen was a record player, three radios, a pound of coffee, numerous bags of candy, two red rubber balls, several light globes and a soccer ball.

NANAIMO — Roads have been washed out and families isolated by the rain-swollen waters of the Nanaimo River. Several families along the river have been forced to flee their homes and others are poised ready to vacate to higher grounds if the waters rise still further.

William Mackie at Work ... winter might be late

Mackie Wears Smile

No Umbrella Is It a Sign?

By JACK FRY

If a weatherman's attire is an indicator, more mild winter months lie ahead.

The point-blank question of whether Old Man Winter will remain mild or whether he'll apply an icy grip here was met by weatherman William Mackie with the agility of a football all-star broken-field runner.

"Present indications are that the weather is going to continue mild. There is no sign yet that Arctic air wants to plunge southward over the entire province," he said, "but at this time of year you've got to expect that can happen."

NO OVERSHOES — The optimistic prediction was counter-balanced, but Mr. Mackie's personal attire supported hopes for continued mildness. He is currently wearing a sports coat and carries no umbrella or overshoes in his car.

As Mr. Mackie explained the situation: "The trend has been so far that Arctic air has been contained in the northern sector."

Man and Wife Who Crashed Both Charged

A Sidney man and his wife pleaded not guilty in city police court yesterday to separate charges of impaired driving.

Hendry Sekkemo and his wife, Edna, were arrested and charged early yesterday after their two cars were in collision on Government Street. Neither one was injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Sekkemo were both remanded for separate trials Jan. 18. Bail was set at $250 each.

Mother Complains:

Molesting Charge Kept from Police

By TERRY HAMMOND

A distraught Victoria housewife whose 15-year-old daughter is a provincial ward has charged that four days elapsed between her daughter's claim, that she had been molested and the filing of a complaint with police.

She said she herself had to notify police in spite of the fact that a welfare caseworker interviewed the girl about an hour after the alleged attack.

EXAM DELAYED — Because of the delay in making the complaint the girl was not subjected to a medical examination until late on the fifth day after the incident.

Following the examination and as a result of investigation police charged and arrested a man in connection with the case.

The mother asked that her name be withheld in order to protect the identity of her daughter.

HAD TO WORK

She said she has been divorced from the girl's father for about 12 years and that two years ago she initiated proceedings to have the child made a ward of the Crown because she found her unmanageable.

Forced to work in order to support her two youngsters the mother said, "I just couldn't seem to handle her, I made no impression on her."

SON DOING WELL

The woman's son, 17, apparently became better-adjusted to the break-up of the family and is a Grade 12 student living at home with his mother.

Her daughter's behavior seemed to improve slightly when she was placed in a local foster-home, the woman said last night.

FIRST NEWS

She said that earlier this month a woman to whose home the girl fled after the alleged assault took place telephoned her to ask if she had been advised of what had taken place.

It was the first the mother had heard of the incident.

POLICE NOT TOLD

She learned that police had not been advised of the alleged attack although a Family and Children's Service case-worker familiar with the girl's background had been called to the scene when the girl had sought refuge in a house close to her foster home immediately following the alleged attack.

ASSURANCE DENIED

The mother said welfare officials would give her no assurance that the police would be notified.

When she tried to see the chief of the Family and Children's Service she was referred to the case-worker who said she "wanted to discuss the girl's record."

CASEWORKER'S OPINION

She said that on the day following her report to the police and five days after the incident she asked the caseworker why police had not been notified and that the worker, a woman, replied that she believed the girl had made up the whole story to attract attention or else had given her consent to the act.

Caseworker Doubted Girl's Story

The mother said she was telling her story in order to help bring about an improvement in the social welfare field.

FOR SAKE OF OTHERS

"I am doing this not only for my daughter but for the sake of other children being cared for by welfare," she said.

She noted with alarm, she said, the charge of Dr. J. D. McGann, a UBC psychologist, who said in Vancouver Tuesday following a 10,000-mile survey of B.C. child welfare services that such services are a provincial scandal.

DELAY CONFIRMED

David Woodsworth, superintendent of the Family and Children's Service here, confirmed the delay last night but added that his agency was not fully aware of the details of the alleged assault and was discouraged from taking action by an unco-operative attitude on the part of the girl.

He said the girl had told the caseworker immediately following the incident that she would not identify her assailant.

PRIVATE AGENCY

The Family and Children's Service is a private agency to which the provincial government has delegated its responsibility for administration of the Protection of Children Act in the Greater Victoria area.

Its funds come largely from the provincial government and partly from municipalities and public subscription.

May Not Lose Them

Oak Bay Councillors Still Draw Expenses

Members of Oak Bay council have not lost their expense allowances and might not lose them, Coun. Gordon Elworthy said last night.

"The move at the last council meeting was a resolution that a bylaw be prepared to repeal the present bylaw which provides an indemnity to compensate members for out-of-pocket expenses," he said.

"Until the new bylaw is considered by council, members of council and Reeve Murdoch are still able to draw their expenses. And it is possible that when the new bylaw is considered it might be defeated."

The present bylaw provides $60 a month for Reeve Murdoch and $20 a month for councillors. The proposed new bylaw will likely be considered at Monday night's meeting of council.

If approved then, it will have to be considered again at the following meeting before it is finally passed.

"What we are aiming at is to repeal the present bylaw and then sit down and come to an amicable arrangement," Coun. Elworthy said.

"A blanket" bylaw is not equitable to all members of council. Some incur much more expense than others because of their duties.

Commissioner

Sworn in last night as a member of Oak Bay police commission, Gordon Carter may also become a member of the Victoria police commission. City council this afternoon is expected to pass a resolution approving Mayor Scurren's recommendation that Mr. Carter be appointed.

Joe E. Didn't Get Tumble Here in Good Old Days

STOMPIN' AT THE SAVOY: Comedian Joe E. Brown was on the Jack Paar Show the other night and reminisced about the good old days when he was part of a tumbling act which appeared at the old Savoy Theatre in Victoria in 1913.

Seems that the act was the last on a long bill and the final show didn't begin until 1 a.m. The show hadn't been a roaring success and on the last night it played here there were only seven people in the theatre at the time Joe's act came on.

As soon as the act started two people walked out; a few minutes later four others left the theatre.

The leader of the troupe stopped the act, walked to the footlights and addressed his remarks to the one remaining member of the audience seated in front row centre.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE: The Horsehoe News on Government has a sign appended over a large number of brown cardboard boxes reading: "This is the last shipment of cigars from Cuba."

CAPITAL COMMENT: Premier Bennett took one look at the news reports emanating from the Liberal convention in Ottawa yesterday, then quickly phoned the legislative press gallery with this one-line comment: "Tim Buck, move over!"

Closer inspection shows the cigars were made in Tampa, Fla.

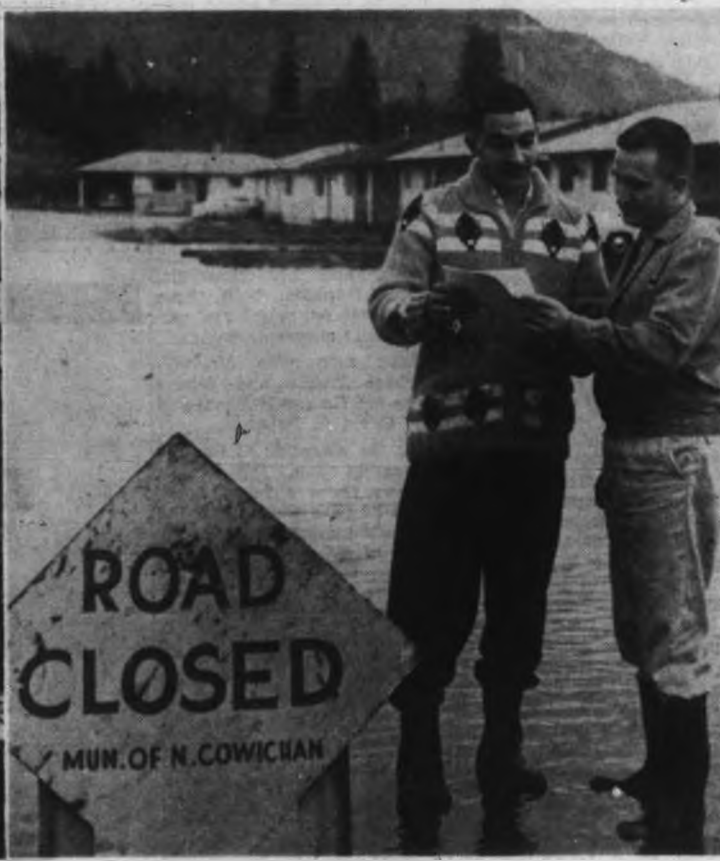

NEW POSTINGS: Popular B.C. Forest Service school lecturer Dick Hall is leaving the service to become assistant director of information with the B.C. Credit Union League in Vancouver. During the past eight years Mr. Hall has given an estimated 1,000 lectures on forest conservation to more than 137,000 students.

CJVI newsman New Gilmer is also off to Vancouver next week and will join Canadian Pacific Airlines public relations department.

Cap from Moose 'Bell' May Start New Fad

WEST HOLME — An ardent hunter here may have started a fad similar to the Davey Crockett coon skin cap that was the rage among kids a few years ago.

Dolphus Holman, a dairy farmer, like every other hunter who has chased the huge northern moose in sub-zero weather, suffered from cold ears, and so he decided to make himself a hat from the "bell" that hangs from the animal's neck.

"A lot of people have shown an interest in it," he said yesterday. "I've taken it out of the alum solution and every once in a while I knead it to keep it from going stiff. When it's plenty loose I'll have a professional seamstress fix it up with lining and all."

Mr. Holman got his chance to make the hat after bagging an 800-pound moose last month 40 miles north of Prince George on the Fraser River.

The cap was his own invention, he said — he had never heard of another.

PORT ALBERNI — An invitation will go from the Chamber of Commerce here to the B.C. Lions, asking the team to use this district's facilities for pre-season training.

The chamber reported that school board of District 70 will co-operate in making dressing rooms and the centennial oval available for use of the Lions if the invitation is accepted.

Mayor Loran Jordan has also indicated that the city's swimming pool and other facilities would be placed at the service of the team.

For several years Lions have gone to Kelowna for their pre-season workouts.

Mackie Wears Smile

No Umbrella Is It a Sign?

By JACK FRY

If a weatherman's attire is an indicator, more mild winter months lie ahead.

The point-blank question of whether Old Man Winter will remain mild or whether he'll apply an icy grip here was met by weatherman William Mackie with the agility of a football all-star broken-field runner.

"Present indications are that the weather is going to continue mild. There is no sign yet that Arctic air wants to plunge southward over the entire province," he said, "but at this time of year you've got to expect that can happen."

NO OVERSHOES — The optimistic prediction was counter-balanced, but Mr. Mackie's personal attire supported hopes for continued mildness. He is currently wearing a sports coat and carries no umbrella or overshoes in his car.

As Mr. Mackie explained the situation: "The trend has been so far that Arctic air has been contained in the northern sec-

Mother Complains:

Molesting Charge Kept from Police

By TERRY HAMMOND

A distraught Victoria housewife whose 15-year-old daughter is a provincial ward has charged that four days elapsed between her daughter's claim, that she had been molested and the filing of a complaint with police.

She said she herself had to notify police in spite of the fact that a welfare caseworker interviewed the girl about an hour after the alleged attack.

EXAM DELAYED — Because of the delay in making the complaint the girl was not subjected to a medical examination until late on the fifth day after the incident.

Following the examination and as a result of investigation police charged and arrested a man in connection with the case.

The mother asked that her name be withheld in order to protect the identity of her daughter.

HAD TO WORK — She said she has been divorced from the girl's father for about 12 years and that two years ago she initiated proceedings to have the child made a ward of the Crown because she found her unmanageable.

'Help Us' Flooded Cowichan Residents' Plea

DUNCAN—Residents of a North Cowichan subdivision flooded by runoff waters are appealing to federal and municipal governments to help stop "discomfort and havoc" for the second year in a row.

Fifty signatures have been obtained on a petition to be sent to Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, W. F. Matthews, MP at Nanaimo, and the municipal council.

TANKS PLUGGED

It claims the more than six inches of rain that fell recently has "resulted in plugging septic tanks, running out yards, weakening the foundations thus endangering our lives and also dropping the value of our houses."

The petition was drawn up and circulated by unemployed planer mill worker Andy Anand, 28, of 2402 Beverley, and William Dame, a logger, who lives on Heather at Beverley.

Anand said the water was within an inch and a half of his carport floor which was covered last year.

HIGH TIME

Most of the petitioners felt it was "high time something was done." Most of the more than 40 houses in the subdivision are having trouble with septic tanks and drainage.

'Havoc' for Second Year

"We estimated the price of our houses have gone down as much as $2,000," he said. "Cracks have appeared in many houses because the water caused the foundations of the houses to sink."

The petition states: "We ask the municipality to compensate us for the damage done to the property and also hauling off the contents from our septic tanks at no cost to us, till such time when the municipality is in a position to give us proper drainage and a sewer system."

CLOSED TO TRAFFIC

Beverley Street was closed to traffic yesterday after being covered with 12 inches of water and causing flooding of eight properties on both sides of the Anand home.

"We believe that if the Cowichan River was cleared to allow faster runoff, areas like ours would not need a sewer system. A sewer system is definitely needed now that the junior high school is going in across the road, where there is also flooding," he said.

The flooding in the area, it is believed, is caused by water backing up on nearby Somenos Creek that empties into the Cowichan River. It in turn is flooding delta lands several miles south-east near Cowichan Bay.

HARDEST SPOT

Hardest spot hit is Clemmelmutz bridge on Tzouhalem Road which was wrecked by flood waters a year ago. A 10-foot road shoulder and two-foot section of asphalt at the north-east corner has been washed out.

"We are trying to save the approach but we don't know if we can until about noon Thursday when there is a 13-and-a-half-foot tide," said Public Works Foreman Edward Marsh. "We're filling the hole with rocks but the water is 10 feet deep there."

He expects the Cowichan River water level will stay about the same level for a day or two unless there is more rain.

Tzouhalem and Cowichan Bay roads are passable to motorists but he urged caution. Tomorrow the Koksilah River just south of the Cowichan will go back to normal because the level had been dropping all yesterday afternoon.

Sabre Key Clue

Revenge Charged In Alberni Case

PORT ALBERNI—Ronald Jarvis Chapman, 39, was convicted in Port Alberni police court of breaking and entering with theft after he accused an 18-year-old accomplice of lying with a motive of revenge when the latter took the witness stand as a witness for the Crown.

Chapman, who has a lengthy record, was remanded for sentence pending receipt of fingerprints from Ottawa.

He was accused with Raymond Allan Brown, 18, of breaking into the home of Mrs. A. C. MacFie, 318 Third Avenue South, on Dec. 31. Brown, who pleaded guilty, was sentenced to nine months' definite and six months' indefinite.

An heirloom sabre stolen from the house was a factor in breaking the case involving the two transients. Police went to a rooming house at 504 Second Avenue South to investigate a report of a brawl in which the sword was being used as a threatening weapon.

In court a quantity of household goods, including a TV set, jewellery, silver flatware, and the sword were entered as exhibits. A metal match safe, which Mrs. MacFie identified as having belonged to her late husband's father, and found on the person of the accused Chapman, was also introduced as evidence.

Brown, in giving testimony as a witness for the Crown, told of first meeting Chapman in a local cafe several days prior to the break-in.

He said that during subsequent meetings with Chapman, the latter had beaten him and that threats of further beatings had induced him to take part in the break-in. He told of taking a Jimmy bar from under a hedge where Chapman had hidden it before going to the scene of the crime.

Questioning Brown on the stand, Chapman suggested that revenge for the alleged beatings was his accomplice's motive in telling "all these lies." Brown denied this, claiming that he was a church-goer, read his Bible and believed in forgiving and being forgiven.

No Decision Yet On Ferry Fares

No decision has yet been made by the provincial government as to whether the Gulf Islands Ferry Company will have to raise its fares, Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi said yesterday.

But, he added, provincial taxpayers had to pay $94,000 to keep the service going last year. "If they want service they will have to pay for it," said Mr. Gagliardi yesterday.

Building Figures Spiral In '60 in Port Alberni

PORT ALBERNI — Sixty-nine new dwellings headed the list of construction in Port Alberni during 1960 with building figures for the year reaching a total of $2,396,946, some $400,000 higher than for 1959.

Report of building inspector William Fraser showed a figure of 173 residential building permits for a total value of $951,150, and 198 commercial and industrial permits totaling $1,445,796.

Largest single permit was for renovation of the assembly wharf with work estimated at $818,742. An office building valued at $210,000, and a bank, $143,474, accounted for the bulk of commercial building in the city.

In 1959 213 permits were issued for a total of $1,990,265.

Duncan Hears B.C. Chamber Chief

'Promises, Taxes of the Future'

DUNCAN — "A politician's promises are the taxes of the future," quoted B.C. Chamber of Commerce president Maurice Finnerty yesterday when he warned that taxes and labor relations were the two major problems of the future.

He urged that "lesser demands" should be made of the government and that the people of the province should "live within our means and discourage government spending that is not needed."

Mr. Finnerty told the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce that he had no solution for labor-management troubles but stated that blame must be shared.

He warned that the province has already got a reputation of being "unreliable because of work stoppages" which has resulted in investors staying away and the removal of some plants to other provinces "because the climate is a lot healthier."

Taxes have reached a total of about one-third of every business dollar, he said. If it goes any higher business will not be able to expand out of profits and would cause unemployment because there would not be jobs for the population increase.

Shopper's Reasons Wanted in Duncan

DUNCAN—Chamber of Commerce will definitely conduct a consumer survey here to get an idea of what the shopper thinks of local stores.

At a meeting yesterday the membership agreed a committee should be appointed.

President David Williams said the survey would question why some shoppers do not patronize stores here.

DUNCAN — Judge Arnold Hannah reduced a bank clerk's driver's licence suspension from six to two months yesterday in county court.

He allowed an appeal against the restriction made in police court against Richard Fowler, 20, who pleaded guilty and was also fined $150 for impaired driving.

Lawyer David Williams appealed the suspension on the grounds that it was Fowler's first conviction.

Pensioners Will Ask MP For Health Insurance Brief

NANAIMO — Nanaimo old age pensioners' organization is going to ask the area's member of parliament, W. F. Matthews, to draw up a brief explaining the old age pensioners' stand on health insurance.

32 cents on every dollar in taxes.

The Nanaimo organization has asked the council's permission to hold its annual tag day and city fathers are considering the matter.

Couldn't Say No To Glass of Beer

DUNCAN—A man who can't say no to a glass or two of beer was let off without a fine for getting drunk when he appeared in court yesterday, but he was interdicted and told the court might send him to Oakalla prison as a cure.

George Miller of Koksilah, south of here, pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk early yesterday on the highway. Police said he was arrested "for the protection of the motoring public and his own."

After being told that Miller appeared in court on the same charge three weeks ago, Magistrate A. C. Sutton asked: "If you're on welfare how do you get liquor?"

"If I don't buy it someone else does," he replied. "Liquor is an affliction and I know so many people."

"I told you before such actions are a swindle on the public. It is not proper. The only thing I can see for you is to send you for a trip to Oakalla. If you come back again it will be a trip. You've got to leave liquor alone," said the magistrate.

Also in court H. A. Angus and Sam McLean, he fixed address, asked to be let off without a fine with Miller but were refused.

They pleaded guilty to charges of being drunk and will serve 10 days each in jail.

Port Alberni

Creeks, Rivers Swelled by Rain

PORT ALBERNI—A total of 4.76 inches of rain fell in the 48-hour period ending at 8:30 Wednesday morning, according to measurements taken at the weather station here while rain was still teeming from the skies.

Creeks and rivers of the district were flowing fast and furious following the two days of almost constant downpour but, although water lapped around doorsteps in some areas, there were no complaints of flood damage.

Temperature remains mild and the forecast is for more rain.

VERNON (CP)—City council will consider exempting fallout shelters from taxes. Mayor Frank Becker said that if tax exemption for shelters was introduced, it would be limited to $400 to avoid too lavish modification of home basements.

World Group Urges Car Safety Belts

LONDON (Reuters)—Compulsory safety belts in all the world's passenger cars were urged by a new organization, the International Safety Belt Association, set up after a two-day conference.

Dr. UH Brunius said people have four times the chance of surviving if they are held inside the car.

Queen Elizabeth
... jewelry worth millions

To Dazzle India

Jewels Go With Queen

LONDON (UPI)—Queen Elizabeth will take nearly $30,000,000 worth of jewels with her when she and Prince Philip leave Jan. 20 for a visit to India, Pakistan, Nepal and Iran.

The gems are not insured because they are considered irreplaceable.

Heading the list of traveling crown jewels is the most costly diadem in the world, a circlet of four huge diamond designs incorporating the English rose, Scottish thistle and Irish shamrock. It is mounted over diamond scroll work enclosed in two rows of Indian pearls.

'PRICELESS'

The cost? "Priceless" is all Buckingham Palace can say. The diadem was made originally for King George IV to wear at his coronation and can be worn only by a reigning Queen. Elizabeth wears it with a diamond necklace worn by her great-grandmother, Queen Victoria.

AS FABULOUS

The necklace worn with it is almost as fabulous. It has extra diamond drops, the largest of which is a pendant weighing 23 carats. It originally was one of the great treasures of Lahore and was presented to Victoria by the East India Company in 1851.

The queen's bodyguard, Chief Inspector Albert Perkins, of Scotland Yard, is responsible for the treasure.

Anxious Nations Manoeuvre To Stop Civil War in Laos

LONDON (Reuters)—Diplomats of a dozen nations manoeuvred Wednesday to stamp out civil war in Laos before it blows up into a major East-West conflict.

Britain shifted its line closer to Canada's call for the dispatch of a stop-gap peace mission to the southeast Asian nation, pending an international conference on the crisis.

Cambodia, a neutral neighbor of Laos, announced that France, Russia and North Vietnam have accepted its proposal for a 14-nation meeting to discuss the Laotian problem.

Tiny Laos Warns Russia Of 'Appropriate Action'

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—The tiny kingdom of Laos told the mighty Soviet Union Wednesday to halt its airlift of supplies to the Communist Pathet Lao guerrillas or it would "take appropriate action." Later four fighters headed to Red airfields and returned without their rockets.

'CALL ELECTION NOW LIBERALS WILL WIN'

Canada Likes Left Wing Liberal Rally Proves It

By DAVE MCINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Anyone for right wing?

The evidence continued to pile up yesterday that, federally at least, Canadians are nearly all left-wingers. Some right-wingers may be around but there hasn't been a peep out of them of late.

At its national rally, Liberals took another left turn with advocacy of a medical care plan, a start on free education at all levels, more federal aid for western farmers and the like.

This poses an awkward problem for the New Party. It may be forced to move even farther left — so far that it

The CCF has long been used to crowding from the Liberals. Former leader M. J. Coldwell used to say he didn't mind any party kidnapping CCF planks as long as needed reforms started.

Supposedly, the Progressive Conservative party is, the right wing in Canada. But under Prime Minister Diefenbaker it has been pulled farther and farther left.

His announcement of a royal commission to study health and his federal aid for Prairie farmers are examples.

There have been reports some Conservatives are unhappy about his leftist policies but nobody is strong enough to oppose him openly.

By a process of elimination it can be said Social Credit is the only right wing party. But it has no representation in Parliament now.

LESTER PEARSON
... New Party hit

Pearson Dares John D

OTTAWA (UPI)—Lester Pearson, given "the entire confidence" of the Liberal party as its leader, last night challenged Prime Minister Diefenbaker to call a federal election, which he said the Liberals would win.

Pearson, who received a 10-minute ovation from 2,000 Liberals at the party's three-day national rally ended, called the rally "a magnificent demonstration of the resurgent strength and vitality of our party."

"The policies worked out here," he said, "put before the Canadian people a responsible and progressive set of national policies."

Pearson said the policies were worked out "in a way that gives ample opportunity for the kind of careful consideration on which Canadians can make their choice when an election does come."

"I hope that day will come very soon, and may the prime minister bring it on, the sooner the better."

STRIKING LIST
Pearson said the government's "list of mistakes of omission and commission is long and striking."

He charged the Diefenbaker administration with "failure to even understand, let alone to deal with the tragic problem of unemployment" and the issue of economic growth.

The Canadian people, Pearson said, "are becoming more and more aware that, while the present ministers may be skilful in the advertising arts of politics, they are not efficient or decisive in the far more important business of government."

VERY SURVIVAL
"With our security and prosperity, our very survival at stake, sound and steady and efficient government is more important than smart politics," he added.

Pearson described the link of the CCF and the Canadian Labor Congress into the New Party as "a marriage of convenience" built on the CCF's "virtual disappearance."

AMALGAMATE
"We are told it is to be a party in which the individualistic largeness of the West are to be amalgamated with big union leaders and socialist intellectuals."

This, I suggest, will be a marriage of inconvenience, of conflicting interests."

Child Critically Hurt

85th Arrest

Cell 'Home' To Heiress

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—Uranium heiress Mrs. Lucile Boyd Gallegos Gillham celebrated her 35th birthday in spectacular manner Wednesday.

When police arrested her early Wednesday morning, they said her car was pointed the wrong way in a one-way street and had collided in order with a Cadillac, Lincoln and a Chevrolet.

It was Mrs. Gillham's 85th arrest in the city of Spokane alone.

She was booked on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, reckless driving, having no operator's licence and being drunk in public.

Then she was taken to the women's section of the city jail where she has a private television set, purchased several years ago to make her stay behind bars more pleasant.

Officers said Mrs. Gillham told them she was returning from Idaho and a pre-birthday party when she got turned around in the city's one-way street system.

Mrs. Gillham, then Mrs. Gallegos, first hit the headlines when she and her younger brother received $340,000 for the rights to uranium discovered on their inherited Indian reservation land near Wellpinit, Wash.

Mercy Flight From Ucluelet

RCMP investigators will fly to Ucluelet from here today to investigate circumstances surrounding critical injuries sustained by a three-year-old youngster rushed to Victoria by plane and taxi last night.

In poor condition is Leslie Hill, daughter of logger Bruce Hill of Long Beach on the west coast of Vancouver Island. Dr. H. R. McDiarmid of Tofo said the child was suffering from a fractured skull.

SOMETHING WRONG

Circumstances surrounding the infliction of the injuries were not known here last night, but RCMP spokesman said "there is a strong indication that there is something wrong here."

Police believe that foul play may be involved, but refused to elaborate.

INJURED MONDAY

The tot is believed to have been hurt Monday.

Public health nurse Myrtle Saxton, an unidentified pilot and a veteran taxi driver combined forces to rush the three-year-old girl from the Tofo hospital to Royal Jubilee Hospital last night.

CALLED FOR EXCORT

Taxi driver G. E. Armstrong of Port Alberni, who made the 130-mile trip in 2½ hours, pulled into a service station on Douglas and phoned for a police escort through the city. Armstrong said the pilot, whose name he didn't know, did a wonderful job "bringing the plane in and landing when it was dark and in rough water."

LINCOLN WHITE

Only Unity Can Save Continent

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—State Department spokesman Lincoln White said yesterday the defence of North America can be assured only through Canadian-American co-operation.

"We need Canada in this effort and they need us," he told a press conference.

White was commenting on a statement by Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson that Canada should alter its role in North American Air Defence Command, doing away with interceptors—manned or unmanned—but continuing to co-operate closely with the U.S. in matters of air detection, identification and warning.

"Let me say that Mike Pearson is an old friend of the United States," White told the press conference.

New Professor Joins Outcry Over Welfare

VANCOUVER (CP)—A university of British Columbia professor Wednesday added his voice to the growing number of critics calling for an investigation into B.C. welfare services.

Prof. W. G. Dixon of the UBC school of social work said:

"The Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows B.C. leads the parade in social problems in Canada... An investigation would be desirable at any time."

No Comment Black Tells New Critics

Welfare Minister Wesley Black stolidly refused to answer criticisms of his department yesterday as more and more people added fuel to the fire in demanding an investigation into the charges made by former B.C. superintendent of child welfare Miss Ruby McKay.

"At the risk of repeating myself, no comment," said Mr. Black.

Miss McKay, who quit her post Dec. 31, charged last week that she resigned because of the government's restrictive policies towards welfare.

Use of A-Arms in Canada Still Under Consideration

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Harkness repeated Wednesday that use of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil is "still under consideration and is a matter to be determined by the government."

The minister made the statement denying a remark that Canada's participation in NORAD does not require use of nuclear weapons on Canadian soil.

U.S. Fears Rising

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

American defence planners view with rising concern expressions of sentiment in Canada favoring a loosening of military ties with the U.S. A Pentagon informant said there seems to be an element of "revelation" in Canada towards meeting the nuclear threat.

His comment was on Liberal leader Pearson's call that Canada do away with interceptors (See below.)

An American authority said the Pearson statement could not be "kissed off" as an isolated Canadian opinion.

CCF Leader Hazen Argue has called NORAD a waste of time because there is no defence against hydrogen bombs. American planners say they are wondering "just how far Canada really wants to go."

Keep NORAD Say Liberals

OTTAWA (UPI)—The Liberal rally last night rejected a proposal that Canada withdraw completely from the NORAD Air Defence Command.

Instead, it adopted a platform favoring the elimination of Canada's interception role and its limitation to detection, identification and warning.

The resolution was in line with the proposal put before the rally two nights ago by party leader Lester Pearson.

World Ignores Starving Congo

ROME (UPI)—The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has failed to find international support for a relief program to halt Congo famine which is killing 200 men, women and children a day.

FAO officials came away empty-handed from an emergency meeting—its third since Christmas—with 24 member nations at its world headquarters here.

Experts have estimated it will take $3,000,000 worth of food plus tens of thousands of dollars in transportation costs to relieve extreme starvation among 150,000 Baluba refugees in the Congo over the next six months.

The FAO was advised just three weeks ago by UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld it would have to assume responsibility for halting the famine because the situation had deteriorated beyond the capacity of the UN Congo operation to deal with it.

Thus far only $750,000 in aid has been promised.
